Idaho Senate votes out ERA

By CHRIS PECK

Times-News writer

BOISE — After five years of trying to undo Idaho's ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, foes of the controversial constitutional provision prevailed Tuesday.

Dead carnations pinned to Stop ERA badges were strewn across the Senate chambers today, red reminders that Idaho no longer endorses the ERA.

On an 18-17 vote the Senate Tuesday afternoon erased Idaho's name from the list of states which have endorsed the proposed 27th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

A total of 35 states, including Idaho, had ratified the ERA prior to the Tuesday vote.

The third state to revoke approval of the ERA.

Meanwhile, Tuesday night, the Nevada Senate voted in favor of becoming the 36th state to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment. However, in Oregon the House State Government Operations Committee voted Tuesday to introduce a bill to rescind Oregon's approval of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Drew Davis, D-Portland, told reporters that while he saw "no reason" to rescind the ERA endorsement, he did think opponents should have an opportunity to have their views aired.

The U.S. Congress—and eventually the Supreme Court—probably will decide whether a rescinder such as the one passed in Idaho actually is legal.

Every seat in the stifling Senate gallery was filled Tuesday as the Senate slowly worked down the daily agenda to House concurrent Resolution No. 10.

As the senators filed into the chambers before the final vote, freshman Democrat Jack Bell, Rupert, summed up the mood of many legislative leaders.

"This is the farthest I think I've ever had to do," Bell said. "I wish I wasn't in this situation."

With piles of anti-ERA mail on his desk, Bell decided to vote against the rescinder anyway.

But when the final roll call vote came, two senators who in the past had supported the ERA caved in to the pressures from the anti-ERA forces.

Sen. Lyle Cobbs, R-Boise, and a man who has four daughters, said his constituents forced him to vote against the ERA.

And Sen. C.E. "Chuck" Bilvench, D-Pocatello, also changed his vote this time.

In the final days before the vote, Cobbs, Bilvench and other senators received an estimated 750 letters from anti-ERA forces in Idaho.

Sen. Richard High, R-Twin Falls, and Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl, acknowledged they too had been under extremely heavy pressure to change their votes on the ERA, but neither did.

"There was a lot of arm twisting in the end," Senator High said. High has been a consistent supporter of the ERA.

Senator Barker, speaking to the hushed Senate floor Tuesday, said he would not change his vote on the ERA because his own daughter had been discriminated against in another state on a question of salary.

"My support of the ERA is my personal commitment to my family," Barker said, casting a glance to the gallery.

He was not the only senator to give an emotional and often very personal plea in support of the ERA.

Republican Sen. Vern Brassey told his fellow senators he had fought all his legislative career to end inequalities. Brassey asked for support of the ERA, warning that if the ERA rescinder passed, "our people will never really be free."

Throughout the final hour, anti-ERA forces in the Senate remained quiet.

They knew they had won.

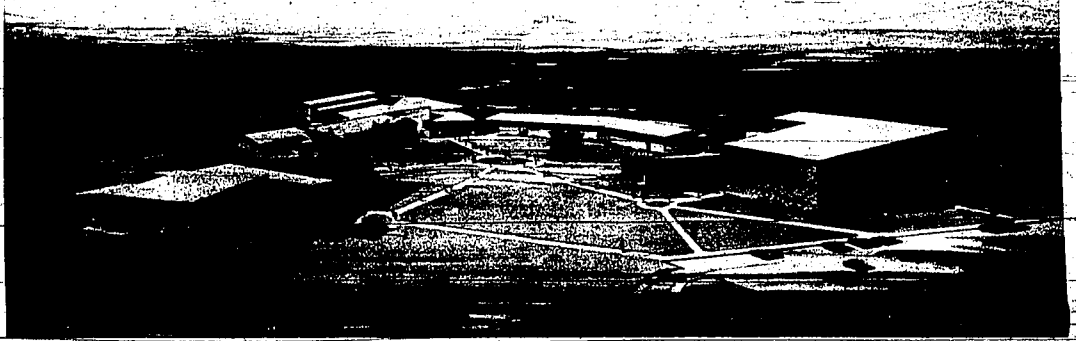

Sen. Dane Watkins, a three-term Republican from Idaho Falls, rose shortly after 2 p.m. to move that the Senate adopt HCR 10.

Watkins, a member of the LDS Church, consistently has opposed the ERA.

In the end, parliamentary maneuvering, not strong speeches against the Equal Rights Amendment, precluded the demise of the simply worded measure.

Majority Leader James Risch, R-Boise, led the parliamentary fight to allow a simple majority vote rather than a two-thirds majority vote to overturn Idaho's 1972 ratification of the amendment.

Risch's argument that only a simple majority was needed to pass concurrent resolution was the key to the ERA defeat. (Continued on pg. 19)

Hollister shooting ruled 'justifiable'

By BOB ZUCKERMAN

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A coroner's jury has ruled the fatal shooting of a 31-year-old father of six was committed to defend his daughter.

In a unanimous decision, the jury Monday found the Christmas Day shooting of John H. Richardson in the back at his Hollister home was a justifiable homicide.

"That's what they said, and I plan to abide by their decision," Twin Falls County Prosecutor Frank Dykas said after the jury announced its verdict.

The prosecutor said he planned to take no further legal action against Penny Richardson, the dead man's wife, who testified during a coroner's inquest Monday that she shot her husband in the back when he tried to beat one of his daughters shortly after midnight, Dec. 25.

The ruling followed a day of agonizing testimony in which the prosecutor called: the mother to the stand, the 16-year-old daughter and another Oregon woman, all who said they had witnessed the shooting and some of the events which led to it.

Mrs. Richardson, 33, testified the shooting followed what was a very depressing day for the Richardson family, a day in which Richardson drank excessively and argued with his wife about their sex life and her alleged rape a month earlier.

Mrs. Richardson said she has filed a complaint against two men, charging them with raping her Nov. 27.

At first, the husband was very understanding about the rape, Mrs. Richardson said. But about a week afterwards he began to argue with her about it, charging her with failing to resist, she said.

Richardson had a long history of doing violence to his children and his wife, Mrs. Richardson said. "I told him he'd kill one of the kids someday," she said.

She described how her husband had choked one of his sons until the son began bleeding from the nose. Her husband had given her two black eyes in one family fight and choked her until she fainted in another, the woman added.

After the alleged rape, the husband became more intolerant, constantly criticizing her for the rape and describing plans for revenge, Mrs. Richardson said.

"After a while, that's all that was on his mind," she said.

The 16-year-old daughter, Terri, agreed with her mother. "After a while it was like walking on glass" around the home, Terri testified.

On the day before the shooting, Mrs. Richardson said her husband was again discussing plans for revenge.

He said he would go after the two men on Christmas Day, "because they wouldn't expect it," Mrs. Richardson said. On Christmas Eve after the couple had returned from a local bar, Mr. Richardson began beating her in their trailer bedroom, the woman said. With her mother crying openly in the court, Terri testified that she came into the room and threw a meat tenderizing mallet at her father.

"You dirty little son of a b—, I'll kill you," Mrs. Richardson quoted her husband as saying to the daughter, as she chased Terri out of the room.

Mrs. Richardson said she came out of the room with a gun in her hand after hearing her daughter saying, "Momma, help me, please help me."

"I didn't go in with the intention of shooting him," Mrs. Richardson said. "Just to protect Terri. I didn't know what he was gonna do ... I wanted to shoot a warning shot."

"I don't even remember pulling the trigger," Mrs. Richardson said.

Swine flu shots soon

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Swine flu vaccine will again be available to Magic Valley residents but they will be required to sign special consent forms, South-Central District Health officials said today.

Joelie Jacobsen, district nursing supervisor, said the flu shots will again be available in all regular health district clinics as soon as the special consent forms are available from the state.

"The public health clinics will provide shots only to persons 65 years of age or older or those with chronic illnesses."

Others may obtain the shots from their private physicians, but Mrs. Jacobsen said the physicians will probably require patients to sign consent forms.

She said the consent forms will explain to the patient the possible risk of contracting Guillain-Barre's syndrome, which a number of persons in other states contracted after having received the vaccination. This led to a moratorium on the immunization shots nationwide.

Mrs. Jacobsen said a conference was held Tuesday with Department of Health and Welfare officials in Idaho at which time it was announced the program would resume in the state as soon as the special consent forms could be printed and distributed.

AF Dam project endorsed

By LORAYNE O. SMITH

Times-News writer

JEROME — North Side Canal Co. stockholders voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to continue their support of the American Falls Dam replacement project and to retain their tax firm.

Voting was on the basis of shares of water held by individual stockholders. About 72,729 shares favored the present contract and 9,856 opposed it — an 88 percent majority.

On the second question, whether to dismiss the law firm of Parry, Robertson, Dally and Larson, because of conflict of interest, stockholders voted 69,825:136 no to 12,398:790 yes votes on the dismissal.

Bernice Jamison, secretary-treasurer of the firm and one of the voters, said the election judges worked until 11 p.m. Tuesday tabulating the election results.

She said there was a "good turnout" of stockholders, with about 380 individuals voting. Many of the voters also held proxies from other stockholders, so there is no accurate way to determine the actual stockholder participation, the secretary said.

Several waterusers from the A and B Irrigation District in the Rupert area appeared, wanting to vote, she said, and "were pretty hot under the collar" because they were not eligible to vote.

Tuesday's election was confined to stockholders in the North Side Canal Co., who at the Jan. 12, 1976, election approved the contract for rebuilding the American Falls Dam by 92 percent.

The election was called after dissidents criticized terms of the present contract at the canal company's annual meeting last month.

Members of the North Side Waterusers' Security Association, formed this winter to fight the contract, succeeded in getting directors of the North Side Canal Co. to set the new election.

DETROIT — Jerome, one of the dissidents, said today his group had not decided what future action to take.

"We're unhappy with the cooperation we received from the board before the election and the way the election was handled," Hiatt said. Rex Yeaman, president of the Security Waterusers, was unavailable for comment.

Hiatt said "Our purpose was to bring out the facts of the contract to everyone" which, he said, "were unable to do prior to the 1976 election."

Dissidents have repeatedly said the contract favors Idaho Power and that stockholders did not understand its provisions. They also charged the Twin Falls law firm with conflict of interest since it also has represented Idaho Power Co.

Bert Larson, one of the law firm's members, said today he "never felt there was a conflict of interest because we're all working for the same thing — to get the dam replaced."

He said his firm is not retained by the power company but has done legal for it on an individual basis. The law firm is on a retainer basis for the canal company.

The dissidents say they intend to continue their fight, but Hiatt said he was not prepared to make any further comment today.

"We're working with the Mini-Cassia Waterusers' Security Association," he said. The dissidents are trying to set up "this kind of organization" in all of the 30 some separate water or irrigation districts served by the American Falls Dam.

The North Side Canal Co. has about 1,800 stockholders, but not all of them are eligible to vote because some are city residents whose lots carry water rights, but the water is entrusted to the city.

Maine spud futures prices probed anew

BY KEN HODGE
TWIN FALLS — The Commodity Futures Trading Commission is now making two investigations into why Maine potato futures trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange — one for last May's default on 1,000 contracts and a new one for conflicting news stories which may have manipulated prices last week.

The most recent investigation, like the first, reportedly involves two western potato barons, J.R. Simplot, Boise, and P.J. Taggart, Oshawa, Wash., and news stories about a large shipment of export potatoes attributed to the latter.

"We need to know just what happened and how it happened," Ray Schleeter, public director of the federal commission said. "We haven't come to a conclusion yet."

The commission is investigating a price fluctuation which is alleged to have been caused by one news wire service story which circulated last Wednesday after the market closed telling of a large export order for potatoes from Simplot Farms, a joint venture of Simplot and Taggart.

Traders on the exchange "offer" the "story" circulated around the exchange causing the price of May 1977 round whites to rise as much as 20 cents per 100 pounds.

Thursday, the price of the potatoes continued to rise to as high as $10.60 per hundredweight but later fell to as low as $10.03 per cwt, when a second news story circulated saying the export order was not as large as first estimated.

The first report was for orders totaling three million cwt, but the second report said the second placed the order at only 300,000 cwt. of the tubers.

"We are looking into the possibility of some false figures being used," Schleeter said. "We have to know whether it was coincidental or by design."

Schleeter also said investigation into the May 1976, potato contract default on the exchange which amounted to 50 million pounds of Maine round white potatoes, is still continuing.

"It is entirely possible that within a couple of weeks some of the findings could be turned over to the commission by the enforcement division," Schleeter said.

The commission is investigating possible market manipulation on the part of the defaulters, of whom Simplot and Taggart were major holders of defaulted contracts.

Ray May's default was termed "unprecedented" by William T. Bagley, chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Buhl master plan recommended

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer
BUIH — A master plan for the city of Buih was recommended Tuesday night by the city's planning and zoning commission chairman and city engineer.

Claude Hayes, new chairman of the Buih Planning and Zoning Commission, reported on zoning requests before his group and progress being made in city zoning. He said the commission has no budget but needs funds for printing, mailing and other expenses.

Hayes told the City Council a plan should be developed to guide the council and planning and zoning commission members in preparing for anticipated growth. He said the new school, which will be built on land now outside of the city limits, will attract growth and several other areas indicate industrial expansion.

Hayes told the council there is a need to establish a general growth plan to assure orderly expansion of both residential and commercial areas.

He said the commission hopes to work with the council and the public for all the input possible in future planning and zoning meetings.

John Priestest, city engineer, told the council his firm can probably handle a master plan for the city for around $3,000 or even as low as $3,500, depending on the extent of the plan the city may want.

"We have made plans for other small communities in about this price range," Priestest said.

He told the council there's a major need at this time to plan for a water system which will include large enough lines leading to potential industrial areas to handle future demands and eliminate costly replacement at later dates.

Mike Felton, attorney, and with the council to present a preliminary plat for a second subdivision in the Rainbow addition. The plat calls for about 17 lots. The city will develop a green belt on both sides of the Broadway railroad crossing along the right-of-way.

Feltonbacher said his committee is also working with the school district to clean up and provide water for the environmental study area at the old labor camp.

The school district uses the property for a study area, but in need of care because most of the trees and other plants are dying for lack of water.

Feltonbacher said it has been a city-school responsibility but he recommended a formal contract be prepared, leaving it to the school for a year to establish responsibility for the property.

Inquest info case key

RUFERT — Admission of inquest testimony into the murder preliminary hearing of Ernest and Griselda Ruffer is perhaps the focal point of the prosecution's case.

Minidoka County Prosecutor H. Bill Manning called the Ruffer's inquest testimony "the best evidence of admissions made by the defendants in this case."

The two are charged with first degree murder and second degree kidnapping in the Easter Sunday, 1975, death of Ernest's mother, Anna Marie Ruffer.

(Related story, p. 13)

Defense attorney James J. May, Twin Falls, charged that the inquest "alleged that 'smacks of the Star Chamber' and the defendants were even kept out of the courtroom."

He said the defendants were not advised of their rights and were not represented by an attorney.

He argued that there was a clear violation of the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in the Miranda case, which requires that anyone taken into custody be advised of their rights against self-incrimination and for an attorney.

Manning argued that there was no Miranda decision, and no warning is required unless there is custody. Minidoka County Coroner Kim Christensen testified that he issued complaints against the defendants two weeks after the inquest.

Ruffer's testimony at the inquest revealed a bizarre tale that led to his mother's death. He told of attaching a six-foot lock chain around his mother's neck and a bedpost, securing the chain at each end with a bolt.

Ruffer said his mother had become forgetful, wandered, swallowed pills and played with sharp instruments, such as knives and scissors. He said he feared for her safety and could not afford to put her in a nursing home.

Questions by jurors elicited details of Ruffer's handling of a $33,000 estate left his mother in 1971. Ruffer said he inherited the estate and it included a farm, a house and $20,000 cash.

He said he sold the house and farm, investing in Seattle real estate. Five of the rentals he purchased were repossessed; the sixth was sold for $19,000 that went into a tavern.

Ruffer said that he had $5,000 cash six weeks before the death, money from sale of property purchased with his mother's money. He said he paid off an automobile debt and other bills, but did not consider spending it to put his mother in a nursing home.

He said he spent six weeks in Las Vegas, Nev.

Teacher talks repeal stalls

By CHRIS PECK
Times-News Writer

BOISE — An attempt to repeal Idaho's teacher negotiation laws failed to get out of committee Tuesday, even though two Magic Valley legislators supported the repeal.

Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome, urged the House

Education committee to repeal the laws because they "completely violate the concept of minority rights."

Hollifield argued current teacher negotiation law is unfair to some teachers because the statutes say a majority of teachers represented by one bargaining agent, meaning the Idaho Education Association, will negotiate for all the teachers in a district.

Hollifield cited a letter from 31 teachers in Idaho Falls who said they weren't given any negotiation powers in recent contract negotiations because they weren't members of the IEA and therefore had no recognized negotiation contract.

"They don't have anyone to talk to," Hollifield said of the Idaho Falls teachers.

While few Representatives disagreed with Hollifield's contention, most felt complete repeal of the negotiations laws wouldn't be wise.

Rep. Dorothy Reynolds, D-Caldwell, said as a teacher she thought it would be disastrous to repeal the negotiation laws because it would lead to individual teachers trying to negotiate their contracts individually with school boards.

"My board wouldn't get anything done if all 200 teachers negotiated separately," she said.

Rep. Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls, supported Hollifield's bill because he said teachers would be better off not negotiating as a group and being represented by the IEA.

"Teachers are better than that," Silvers said.

But in the end, Silvers found little support for his position and the bill to repeal the negotiations act failed, 4-13.

Dworshak refill pledged

BOISE (UPI) — After a meeting with representatives of the Bonneville Power Administration and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Gov. John V. Evans said Tuesday the ten-foot drawdown of Dworshak Reservoir will continue as planned although it will be replaced.

Evans said he was told that while the reservoir may never be refilled to "acceptable" capacity levels, he received assurances that the ten-foot drawdown would be restored.

U.S. Army Maj. Gen. Wesley Peel, Portland, said he is "shooting for May 1" to replace the water that is being drawn down 10 feet below normal for this time of year.

BPA administrator Don Hodel said the agency, in working out further draw-downs, will aim for "better communication than we had in the past."

District-wide trustee voting proposal buried

By CHRIS PECK
Times-News Writer

BOISE — A bill allowing all residents of a school district to vote for all trustees to serve on the school boards was killed Tuesday with the help of four Magic Valley legislators.

A bill before the House Education committee was buried after a number of Magic Valley senators said they couldn't support the idea of district-wide majority votes for all school board members.

Currently, Idaho law says voters who live in the same trustee zone as the person seeking a local school board position may vote only for the one trustee in their district.

Local school districts are divided into various zones under current Idaho Code.

Often, these zones are divided so that a large town is included in one zone and a widespread rural area comprises another zone.

Rep. Ernest Hale, R-Burley, pointed to this geographic determination of trustee zones as a reason he would not support a change in the law.

"My objection is that the populated areas would control the whole school board," Hale said.

He cited the Burley school district as an example.

The city of Burley is the school zone and the rural areas of Declo, Malta and other towns in rural Cassia County form a second school district zone.

Allowing all residents to elect all school board members would only lead to the cities controlling the school boards," Hale said.

Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, urged the Education Committee to support her bill because she claimed it was a more democratic way of electing a school board.

Jim Reis, D-Grangeville, agreed with McDermott, saying too often school board members are elected with only a handful of votes.

Reis argued allowing all residents in a school district to vote for all school board members would be more democratic, more fair, and would generate more interest in school board elections.

But Rep. Mack Nelbaur, R-Rupert, argued that allowing all patrons to vote all school board positions would eliminate rural areas from having representation on school boards.

"Majority rule is not always the best way," Nelbaur said. "The minority has to be protected."

Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer, and Rep. Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls, added that they also didn't support the idea of district-wide elections for school board members.

After an hour of debate, the McDermott-sponsored bill was held in the Education committee with all four Magic Valley legislators on the committee voting with the 11-5 majority.

No 'fingering' in Teton probe

DENVER (UPI) — The head of an Interior Department review committee studying the design of the Teton Dam in Idaho says there is no attempt being made to place individual blame for the dam's collapse last June which killed 11 persons.

"We're not interested in fingering individuals," Dennis Sachs, an Interior Department official, said Tuesday. "We're more interested in determining which design procedure may not have been explicit enough."

The dam is the ultimate responsibility of the Office of Design Construction at the Denver Federal Center. The office is headed by Harold G. Arthur, director of design.

Sachs said some procedures may have been so unclear that engineers couldn't interpret possible solutions to a design problem.

He said an independent panel of investigators recently concluded there was too much dependence on a "grout curtain" made of cement slurry pumped into cracks in the foundation rocks of the dam.

Another design defect was the use of erodible silt compacted into certain other cracks, Sachs said. The dam failed from seepage through such cracks.

"Defects in procedures may have been larger than any individual," Sachs said. But he said if any individual negligence were found, "it would be of concern" to the department.

Some roads slick

BOISE (UPI) — New snow fell on portions of northern and southwestern Idaho today and ice made roads hazardous for travel in other areas.

By road, this was the report from the state departments of Transportation and Law Enforcement:

U. S. 95 — Council to New Meadows, snowing; Midvale to New Plymouth, icy spots; Caldwell to Oregon Line, icy; Plummer to Moscow, icy spots.

U. S. 95 — Council to New Meadows, snowing; Midvale to New Plymouth, icy spots; Caldwell to Oregon Line, icy; Plummer to Moscow, icy spots.

U. S. 95 — Council to New Meadows, snowing; Midvale to New Plymouth, icy spots; Caldwell to Oregon Line, icy; Plummer to Moscow, icy spots.

U. S. 12 — Moscow to Plummer, fog; Lolo Pass, snowing, icy.

State Highway 21 — Boise to Stanley, icy spots.

Interstate 80N — Caldwell to King Hill, icy.

State Highway 68, U. S. 20-26 — Cal Creek Summit, icy.

U. S. 93 — Lost Trail Pass, icy spots.

State Highway 51 — Granger to Nevada line, icy spots.

Showers dampen N. California

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The first measurable precipitation in more than a month touched parts of parched Northern California Tuesday but, skiers were clearing today and the weatherman said much more water is needed to overcome the prolonged drought which has threatened state agriculture and local economies and triggered intertribal fighting.

In the central state, the nation's richest farming area, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation has announced a 75 per cent cutback in water delivery to areas served by the Central Valley Water Project and a 50 per cent reduction in water allocations to its municipal users.

Washington: a town of sweaters and small cars

BY LINDA CHARLTON
N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — Linumines are out; sweaters are in; and humble pie is on every official menu in town these days. But for all the new gospel of less is more, the old axiom that rank hath its privileges has not quite faded away.

The long black cars, whose presence outside any building advertised the presence of power within are generally shorter these days, and there are fewer of them to be seen whisking top officials home from the office. Cabinet officers, as the regulations allow, still get port-to-port transportation. Although the word "limousine" sends a shudder of populist horror down information officers' spines these days, cabinet-level cars are still large and black.

So is the Mercury that takes Postmaster General Benjamin Bailor to and from his appointed rounds; his deputy is also provided with a car and driver — "chauffeur" is another word whose worth plummeted on January 20 — to bring him to the office and take him home. That, however, is apparently the exception in the new austerity. In most departments, only the secretary himself or herself is spared the tedium of traffic. The Librarian of Congress, Daniel Boorstin, drives his own yellow Volvo to work, the White House press secretary, Jody Powell plans to work between 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue and the affluence of Foxhall Road in his Volkswagen as soon as it gets here from Georgia.

The director of the Office of Management and Budget, Bert Lance, is coming to work in a car pool with one of his aides; Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, a department spokesman, says, is "extremely interested in reducing all perquisites." The gentleman in charge of the Department of Transportation's car pool, asked if anyone but Secretary Brock Adams got driven home and back, replied grimly, "not out of my pool, they don't."

There are those who point out that one reason for the sudden drop in the use of chauffeur-driven government cars is that there are sport government officials to and from work is that there are still a number of vacant slots at the under secretary level, for instance. So it may be absolutely true that no one but the secretary is being driven home, and still mean nothing.

It was not ever so, not by an infinite horsepower, worth of chrome and cranks. Ford administration Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb enjoyed home-to-office transportation until the end, as did his two deputies. Zarb's successor, John P. O'Leary, is still in a hotel, and is being driven to and from work; when his own car arrives from New Mexico, a spokesman said, "he'll be driving himself."

A General Accounting Office report on automobile use in September 1974, estimated the number of "prestige sedans" — the sort of car used to transport bureaucrats — in the government at 678 as of April of that year. Sen. William Proxmire, the self-appointed scourge of spendthrift bureaucracy, has since again introduced his "limousine limitation" bill to reduce the number of cars for the exclusive use of "government big shots" from what he says is the present 700 to "about 37." According to Hugh Carter, Jr., Carter's first cousin once removed who is also special assistant to the President for administration, only President Carter and Vice President Mondale are entitled to be driven to and from work; Carter's cousin has the advantage of working at home. There are still 36 cars with drivers in the White House car pool, but they are to be used only on official business, he said.

If you go get there is losing its usefulness as an indicator of power, where you can eat lunch retains some of its lustre. The White House Mess is still providing lunches for a privileged 130, although secretaries in the West Wing have carry-out privileges.

A barbecue sandwich, according to Carter, would cost $1.50 in the mess, a full lunch between $2.50 and $3, and lobster or steak between $3 and $5 — all prices below those in the outside world. "Food prices," Carter said, "are subject to review. We fully intend to get into the financial side of the White House Mess."

The Pentagon has charge of what one irreverent military man described as "you call, we haul," service available to top-level bureaucrats and members of Congress, known as the Special Missions Fleet of the 89th military airlift wing, based at Andrews Air Force base, 1,200 personnel strong. It includes the two presidential aircraft and 23 others, ranging up from a personal "executive jet" planes.

It is used to fly Cabinet officers, "designated members" of their staff, and "executive level" Department of Defense employees. It is also used to fly members of Congress around on special missions.

Such a situation might be, a Pentagon spokesman said, a committee needing a fly to Europe to attend an international conference. The department provides "escorts" — staff-grade military officers who handle scheduling, money changing, getting everyone to and from airports, all the little details that can make travel so tedious.

And for the top-level bureaucrat who just needs to get away from it all, there are Camp-Hoover, in Shenandoah National Park, and Brinkerhoff House, in Grand Teton National Park. Both are run by the National Park Service, which both provide freshly made beds and tidy rooms on arrival, and turnish wood for the fireplaces. There are kitchens, but no service.

Costs at Camp Hoover, whose three cottages were in use "just about every weekend" during the months it was open last year, are $22.47 per day for the first one or two persons, and $6.47 for every additional person.

Shouldn't come to worst there are Washington-area hospitals, the National Naval Medical Center, and Walter Reed Army Hospital. They are open to cabinet members — and on an ad hoc basis, their families — and members of Congress, plus foreign heads of state, the Supreme Court, and a wide swathe of Pentagon brass.

The President, who is also eligible, is not charged. Even those who do pay, don't pay much. Nancy Kissinger, admitted with stomach ulcers, paid $147 a day — at a time when ordinary Washington hospitals were charging $170 and up — private rooms.

Besides, just one charge includes everything — physician and drugs, surgery and nursing, X-rays and whatever else is required.

How to quiet the barking dogs

At 3 a.m. it's hard to think of many charitable words for the neighbor next door whose dog has barked itself hoarse.

The early morning message to that oblivious dog owner probably wouldn't be printable or speakable.

Well, two Twin Falls women have come up with a kooky, but practical scheme to better the communications between neighbors, lovers, haters or just about anyone else.

The new business, advertised as a "Lipping Off Service", is less violent than a punch in the nose and less expensive than a lawyer.

For two dollars, a caller from Lipping Off Service will politely inform a neighbor his barking dog is keeping somebody nearby awake at night.

Or, the novel calling service will tell the boss he has "bad breath" or let some pestering boyfriend know that his antics aren't winning friends with other family members.

These women of "Lipping Off Service" have come up with a great idea.

Probably the best way for two people to communicate would be to sit down on a neutral park bench and quietly discuss what is eating at their souls.

This rarely happens. Most complaints either lead to permanent hard feelings between friends or more instant reactions such as tears, profanity or fistfights.

But, at the same time, most civilized human beings are careful not to offend the general social norms.

Public pressure is a powerful force and those who think they may be subjected to a critical dosage usually make amends if they can.

Here is where the anonymous, but courteous call plays an important role.

"Sure, some people may abuse the Lipping Off Service and many harmless pranks probably will be channeled through the new business.

But the next time a barking dog keeps you awake, consider the two dollar investment in a new private enterprise that might keep your blood pressure under control.

Better weather forecasts sought

By RICHARD D. LYONS
N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — The coldest winter in 40 years in most parts of the country is creating a new interest in private weather forecasts.

Dissatisfied with such meteorological generalities from the National Weather Service as "partly cloudy" and "temperatures in the mid-30's," both the public and industry are demanding more detailed, up-to-the-minute information on changes in the weather.

In New York City, a record six million calls were made last month to the New York Telephone Company for its recorded forecast, including more than 500,000 on Jan. 14, when there was a 5-inch snowfall. The cost of the calls range from 6 cents to 10 cents.

"The weather is one of those things that promotes itself," said Hatzel Morris, a spokesman for the company. "What we found that normally about 10,000 such calls are made daily."

Even in the hamlet of St. Jacob, Ill., which has only 648 telephone subscribers, there were 34,000 calls to the local telephone weather number last month. The service is relatively new in St. Jacob and includes a 14-second commercial for a local bank in the one-minute recorded announcement.

Richard Schmidt, the owner of the St. Jacob Telephone Company, said that the service was installed last year in St. Jacob and about 25 other communities in the state at the request of former Gov. Dan Walker.

"The governor wanted to make weather information more readily available," Schmidt said, "and we found that some of the advisories provided by the National Weather Service were unsatisfactory." As examples, he said that the National Weather Service had been slow in issuing forecasts for the area and that the voice of the service's forecaster was sometimes indistinct.

"We contracted with the Audichron Company of Atlanta to provide us with updated weather reports, a local bank to pay for the service, and everyone came out ahead because the service to the telephone subscriber is free," Schmidt said.

Douglas Dooley, the manager of Audichron's Newark division, said that communities from Newark to Des Moines were using its commercial weather service. He said that Audichron maintained its own weather computer, which was connected to those of the National Weather Service in Suitland, Md., and employed four full-time meteorologists and one part-time meteorologist.

The National Weather Service makes available in communities throughout the country a series of short- and long-range forecasts by telephone or a variety of electronic means.

Kenneth C. Spengler, executive secretary of the American Meteorological Society, with headquarters in Boston, said that these were just a few examples of the expansion of private weather forecasting.

"A lot of people who didn't take the weather seriously before are doing it now," Spengler said, adding that the society had a big increase lately in inquiries from the public and industry about private forecasting services. Spengler said that about half the society's 9,000 members were employed by federal, state and local governments and the military while about 1,000 were employed by industry. Another 600 are either self-employed or in private weather consulting, he said.

While the recent weather problems have stirred interest in private weathermen, Spengler said that a great deal of the impetus stemmed from passage of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. Under its terms, detailed environmental impact statements that require meteorological data must accompany the plans for virtually any major project that would influence the ecology, such as power plants, dams and airports and highways.

The meteorological data might include information about the "effects" of higher temperatures on marine life, as in the case of a nuclear power plant.

John Wallace, founder of Weather Services Corp. of Bedford, Mass., said, "There has been quite an increase in the demand for our services in the last five to 10 years."

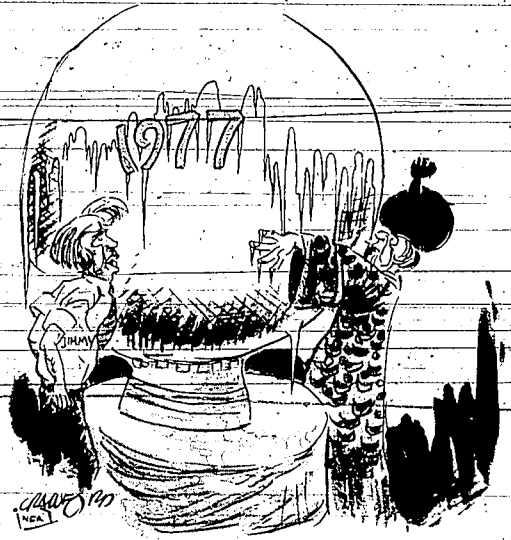

Wallace defined his corporation's services as "picking up where the National Weather Service leaves off by supplying information with more details for exact locations."

He explained that the National Weather Service might forecast a high for the day within a range of 5 degrees but that a local electric utility would be interested in exact information about wind directions and velocities and the exact amount of sunshine that might be expected, all of which could affect the use of power.

The National Weather Service does a great job and we don't consider ourselves in competition with it," Wallace said, explaining, "We supply a service it's not staffed to supply."

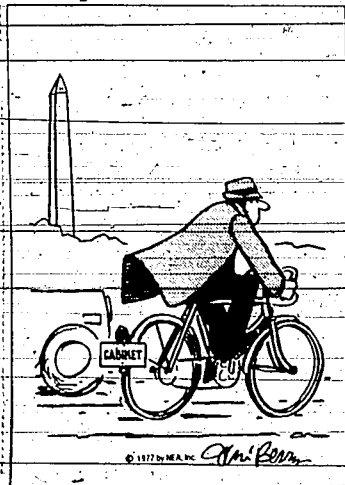

Wallace and other private meteorologists said that their services were being solicited increasingly by commodity houses and grain shippers seeking information about global weather conditions and highway departments seeking data on snow conditions.

Boynton Beckwith, a meteorological society officer who recently retired after 40 years as an airline meteorologist in Chicago, noted that some radio and television stations had been hiring meteorologists as weathermen rather than having "a showgirl or a guy with a gimick" recite the weather.

"I'm sorry, Mr. President, I can't see the future until the present thaws out."

'Right-to-Work' supporter explains law's benefits

Editor, Times-News:

Unions versus right to work? There is much more to the edifice than meets the eye.

A recent letter in the Times-News demanded, unions, with the argument that the farmer needed a union job in the winetime so they could make a decent wage to live on through the winter.

Why does a farmer have to leave the farm to get a city job in the winter? I'll tell at least one reason why. Most of the consumer products the farmer must buy is processed, manufactured and delivered by union labor. I don't wish to belittle a man's job but I do believe it to be unfair for a man that belongs to a gang to be able to force industry or business to pay a large wage for a job that involves little in special skills or ability.

Consider the following: The farmer must have invested tens of thousands of dollars. The union worker in many jobs has no investment in tools, equipment or finished product. In other jobs the union worker may have a few dollars to a few hundred invested in personal tools he uses. I believe the union auto mechanic would be the exception with several thousand dollars invested in tools. The farmer must work long hard hours with no guarantee of reward. The farmer takes chances of crop failure from not enough rain, too much rain, hail, frost, wind and other freaks of nature he cannot control.

The union worker gets a guaranteed wage often obtained by the coercion of blackmail of a strike. If the union worker goes on strike he often receives benefits during the strike paid for in inflated prices on union-made goods and services that you and I bought.

I don't wish to infer that unions haven't accomplished some good. Unions have done good, but I am against the apparent inherent evils that seem to follow strong or big unions such as:

1. Inflated prices on consumer goods and services. This also hurts us on the international market and increases import of products using foreign labor.

2. Hotheadism, destruction of property, death and injury directed to those that oppose or don't use union labor or toward those that don't knuckle under to union demands.

3. The tragedy of ever increasing prices as it affects those on fixed incomes and those with savings. My grandmother was robbed by the gangs that forced prices to continually rise. Her Social Security and modest savings were no match to the high prices caused by man's greed.

If you haven't experienced some of these truths, you need documentation. One place to check would be with the Reader's Digest as they have had good articles on this subject.

A vote for the Right-to-Work amendment is a vote against inflation and gang rule. We may not change the nation, but we can keep our integrity. Let's have "the right to work."

Crimes, punishment

Editor, Times-News:

I read in the paper where someone in Burley was sentenced to 15 years for three counts of burglary and 14 years for grand larceny.

On the next page someone in Twin Falls got 20 years for selling heroin.

A few days ago, I read where a woman shot and killed her lover and she got 30 days in jail. Also a man shot and killed his own son, to show he was the best man, and he was tured free.

I began to wonder how was the best way to commit a crime? I came to the conclusion: It was much better to shoot people than to steal, or sell people what they want to buy.

Then I looked up what happened to Congressmen and the White House aides, that was legal and not so legal, and decided, that was much better.

Finally, I decided the best way was to copy lockboxes, and bribe others with taxpayers' money, and keep the profit that came back in return, as blackmail seems to be above the law, if you are big enough, but be very careful; if you are a common person.

Here is a list of don'ts, according to punishment:

Heroin 20 years; burglary 15 years; Congress-kicked out (maybe); Burglary that came back in force, from six months to six years, on the whole.

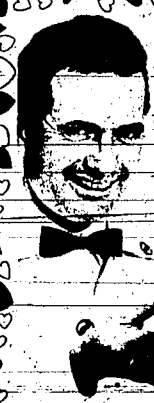

Bribery, free, with millions in profit. The bribery sounds best to me.

Smith trial delayed

Secretary gets reprieve

CHICAGO — It was to have been the last day of work for the secretary fired after refusing to brew the office coffee. She got a reprieve.

"I got a call from Springfield this morning. They said I could work another two weeks until my boss gets back from Mexico," where he is on vacation. His Rivera said yesterday in the office that he is on vacation.

The 35-year-old secretary had worked there for more than two years when her boss, James G. Rivera, gave her two weeks' notice on Jan. 25.

Mrs. Rivera had contended in refusing to make coffee that she did not drink it. It was not on her list of responsibilities and the request made to female secretaries was sexist.

Clayton may get tough

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Navy Secretary-designate Graham Clayton says he might get tough with shipbuilders who have cost $2.4 billion in claims against the government, even forcing them into bankruptcy if it is in the national interest.

Clayton told the Senate Armed Services Committee Tuesday the shipbuilding claims were among the first things to which the Navy gave personal attention. The claims for increased costs have delayed delivery of a number of new warships.

Ford dream?

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — If Ronald Reagan persists in keeping alive his dream of winning a presidential election, so does Gerald R. Ford.

That's what the former president — who never won an election outside his own Michigan congressional district — told a luncheon gathering of Yale students at historic Mory's Tavern Tuesday.

It was the final day of Ford's three-day visit to Yale University, his alma mater, as a visiting Chubb Fellow professor.

Reporters were kept outside the luncheon, but they got word from favored participants about some of the 63-year-old Ford's remarks. Ford said that the former California governor had not ruled out another presidential quest in 1980, citizen Ford snapped. "Neither do I."

Real estate executive still held hostage

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A former "West Point" gun instructor, saying the police "are lucky they're dealing with me," showed no signs Wednesday of releasing a real estate executive — he took hostage at gunpoint more than 24 hours earlier charging he had been cheated in a mortgage deal.

Police resumed negotiations with Anthony Kirtiss, who held Richard Hall, 42, hostage in Kirtiss's apartment with a shotgun wired to his neck.

Kirtiss abducted Hall from his downtown office Tuesday morning, paraded him along city streets, commandeered a police car and took him to the west side apartment.

Kirtiss told police he had the apartment wired to explode. Police confirmed the wiring and said Kirtiss had recently purchased at least 25 stocks of dynamite.

"You've got 100 officers trying to get a shot at me," Kirtiss said today in a telephone call to radio station

WIBC. "I didn't go down there to be a buffoon. I went down there for vengeance."

Kirtiss said he was cheated in a business deal with Hall's firm and issued several demands, including one that the companies cancel his debt of $100,000, due March 1. He was trying to develop as a shopping center.

He also sought assistance from police and the Marion County prosecutor that he would not be charged nor committed for psychiatric treatment.

"They're lucky they're dealing with me and I'm stable," he said. "Without being egotistical, I'm the strongest man mentally that I know. The average guy who would have gone through this would have had a heart attack or stroke. They're lucky they're dealing with me."

A spokesman for Hall's two firms issued a public statement Tuesday night on television, saying they had influenced two grocery stores and a restaurant not to locate on property owned by Kirtiss.

"We publicly state we are willing to pay Mr. Kirtiss damages," said the statement signed by Hall's father, M.L. Hall.

However, Kirtiss said today, "Those people are going to document every knife I stuck in my back, and going to walk out of there a free man."

"I told this man (Hall) that after all he's done, I couldn't hate him but I sure could kill him," Kirtiss said.

Deputy Police Chief James T. McAtee said Kirtiss had been enough food in the apartment to last 100 days.

'Hustler' publisher fined and sentenced

N.Y. Times Service NEW YORK — Larry Flynt, the publisher of Hustler, a national men's magazine, was found guilty Tuesday of engaging in organized crime and pandering obscenity. He was sentenced to 7 to 25 years in prison and fined $10,000 on the obscenity charge.

Hustler magazine was found guilty on both counts. It was fined $10,000 for engaging in organized crime and $1,000 for pandering obscenity. Three other defendants associated with the magazine were found not guilty.

The organized crime charge was based on an Ohio statute that defines organized crime as the combination of five or more participants in illegal activity for profit.

The five-week trial, which has been watched closely by civil libertarians, was considered a major test of the application of community obscenity standards. Community standards are among the criteria cited by the United States Supreme Court in its definition of obscenity. The Supreme Court ruling states that to be judged obscene, the offending material must be "patently offensive" to community standards.

But the question raised by the obscenity trial of a national magazine is which community standards should prevail? Would the standards of the most conservative community in the country, for instance, be a valid test in which to judge whether a national publication was obscene?

Herald Price Fahringer.

Flynt's lawyer, maintained throughout the case that Simon Leis Jr., the Hamilton County (Ohio) prosecutor, had no jurisdiction over the editorial and production operations of the magazine, Hustler, is

Second language

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spanish apparently will be the First Family's second language.

President Carter is fluent in the language — going so far as to read the Bible in Spanish (Ohio) — and now the First Lady Rosalynn Carter will study it three days a week, beginning next week.

Son Chip and his wife Carol also will sit in on the lessons at the White House, along with Mrs. Grace Vance, wife of the secretary of state, Evan Dobbelle, expected to be named chief of protocol, and Dobbelle's wife Kit.

The starting date — next Monday — happens to be the day Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo comes to Washington with his wife for a state visit.

published in Columbus, printed by Dayton and distributed out of Derby, Conn. Fahringer also asserted that the conviction of Flynt would mean that in the future no national publication would be safe from obscenity charges brought by any local prosecutor.

Carter at ease with newsmen

Carter accepts question during press meet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In his first news conference since taking office, President Carter said the United States will "come out better in dealing with the Soviet Union" if he speaks out against repression while seeking mutual arms cutbacks.

Carter said his desire to resume negotiations on nuclear weapons reductions will not deter him from criticizing Moscow's tactics against dissidents, and the Kremlin should not link the two issues.

"I think we come out better in dealing with the Soviet Union if I am consistently and completely dedicated to the enhancement of human rights," he said. "I think this can legitimately be severed from our inclination, for instance, in reducing dependence on atomic weapons."

The news conference Tuesday centered largely on foreign affairs, and Carter appeared at ease with the subject.

He said he rejects former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's "linkage" of the human rights issue and arms negotiations because, "I don't want to tie everything together in one package."

Then, as if to drive home the point, the President said he regrets "very deeply" the Soviet imprisonment of dissident leader Alexander Ginzburg and the Kremlin's expulsion of an Associated Press reporter who frequently wrote about dissension.

"But I can't go in with armed forces and try to change the internal mechanisms of the Soviet government," he said.

Carter said he does not think such criticisms will hamper his desire to reach "quick agreement" with the Russians on limiting strategic arms. And he repeated his willingness to reach a new arms limitation pact in two stages — putting off until later the controversy over limiting America's cruise missile and the Soviet Union's Backfire bomber.

For now, Carter said the United States has "superior nuclear capability" over the Soviet Union, but that either nation could destroy 50 million to 100 million people in a nuclear attack.

The threat of this kind of holocaust is what makes it important that we do keep an adequate deterrent capability," and drastically reduce dependence on atomic weapons worldwide, he said.

Carter said he thinks the United States and the Soviet Union both must negotiate some weapons cutbacks, and he suggested the Kremlin stop deploying a limited range mobile missile difficult for American systems to detect.

He said he has "complete confidence" in Paul Warnke, his controversial choice to head U.S. arms negotiations, who has been accused of favoring unilateral weapons reductions.

"I have no concern about his attitude," Carter said. "There will be instances on nuclear weapons where each country has to take some initiatives. But the overall balance of mutual restraint is what counts."

On other subjects, Carter: — Reserved the right to veto the sale of concussion bombs to a "foreign country" after further review. He said previous announcements —

United States had agreed to sell such bombs to Israel were not cleared with him or the State Department.

Warnke's upcoming plan — on long-range energy — will "require substantial sacrifices on the part of the American people."

— Opposed nationalization of the energy industry.

— Reserved the right to veto the economic package approved by Congress if it made "drastic changes" in the $31.2 billion, two-year program he submitted.

Soviets open Salyut space lab

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two Soviet cosmonauts moved from their Soyuz 21 spacecraft to the Salyut 5 space laboratory today, settling in for an apparently lengthy stay aboard the orbiting station.

The official Tass news agency said the cosmonauts, who docked their craft with Salyut Tuesday night, transferred to the larger capsule after a night of rest and preparation.

Tass said the cosmonauts, Col. Viktor Gorbatko, 42, and flight engineer Lt. Col. Yuri Glazkov, 37, "will continue experiments and investigations" begun by the Soyuz 21 crew last July during a 49-day stay.

US security first, arms negotiator says

NEW YORK (UPI) — Paul C. Warnke pledged to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tuesday that if confirmed as President Carter's chief arms control negotiator, he would "seek ways to limit and reduce arms already in existence so as to make this country more secure."

Although some concern was voiced about Warnke's well-known advocacy of an aggressive arms control policy, the overwhelming majority of the committee seemed to welcome his nomination as director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency and as the negotiator at the strategic arms limitations talks with the Soviet Union.

Because of advance criticism of Warnke voiced by some senators and outside conservative groups, the committee chairman, John

PAUL C. WARNEKE... views queried

Johnson Administration, twice turned down Carter's offer but then was prevailed upon to accept the arms control post, the President said.

At the Senate hearing, which was crowded with spectators, Warnke sought to stress his dedication to arms control measures under proper safeguards and to rebut interpretations of his views that have accused him of seeking "unilateral" disarmament.

The main doubts about Warnke's views were raised by Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., who said he thought it might be better if Warnke did not have the negotiating position as well as the arms control agency job.

Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Miss., said that he wanted to be sure that Warnke's

"philosophy" was explored because the results of this hearing would be a foreshadowing of Senate views on Carter's arms-control views.

Warnke, who said that he would only be Carter's adviser and could not make policy himself, said that if confirmed "I will do my best in this capacity to argue persuasively for arms control initiatives where I believe they are warranted."

Autos fail air testing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency has added a new technique to its clean air campaign — pulling cars off the assembly line to make sure they live up to emission standards demonstrated with computer prototypes.

Senior EPA spokesman says the agency says it looks like a "major gap" exists between the promise of the prototypes and the performance of cars headed to the consumer.

The initial round of tests last month, production models of 1977 Ford Granadas and Mercury Monarchs produced up to eight times the legal maximum of carbon monoxide.

The EPA ordered assembly line modifications and the recall of 54,000 cars. Ford quickly complied, but a company spokesman said EPA assembly modifications have been made and assembly lines will be moving.

Adding EPA chief John Quigg announced the unprecedented order Tuesday.

Campaign aid boost?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Election Commission wants to increase the government funds used in finance presidential elections and the amounts that candidates can raise and spend in the primaries.

In its annual legislative recommendations to Congress Tuesday, the FEC said the current $121.8 million per candidate limit could be raised to as high as $35 million.

Congress is expected to make some major revisions in the campaign finance law this year and may consider expanding federal campaign financing to cover House and Senate races as well as the presidency.

Andrus backs law on strip mining

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, backing proposed federal strip mining laws, Tuesday said the nation "cannot afford" to let past practices continue and argued that U.S. energy needs could be met with the safeguards Andrus and Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp both testified at a House Interior subcommittee hearing and were welcomed warmly by Democratic members who have sought for six years to enact mine reclamation laws.

Andrus said Americans "cannot afford" to permit historical mining practices to continue, particularly since environmentally sound mining can meet the nation's energy and economic needs.

"You cannot imagine how loud words are music to our ears," interjected Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, Chairman Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said. "I really never felt the impact of the election last November until this morning."

The bill would require reclamation of most lands disturbed by surface mining for coal, to their approximate original contour, and would set regulations for mining and reclaiming the land.

Shapp said 13 years of experience in his state with a strong surface mining law had shown coal could be strip mined cleanly, efficiently and relatively inexpensively with proper environmental safeguards.

"If we rush to strip mine our coal without providing adequate safeguards to our environment, we will end up exchanging the current crisis of an energy shortage for an even greater future land, water and health crisis," Shapp said.

"Our law has not hampered production, stifled profits or cost jobs," Shapp added. "An economic benefit has resulted while the scars of coal production have been reclaimed into valuable public and private resources."

Although the Democratic majority on the subcommittee applauded the words of Andrus and Shapp, some Republicans — especially Reps. Joe Skubitz of Kansas and Robert Bauman of Maryland — questioned the need for a bill.

Bauman cited President Ford's veto message, which forecast a decrease in coal production under the law, and said, before passing a bill, "we ought to know if we are going to suffer substantial losses."

BOISE — Proposed grazing regulations for public lands in the western United States, originally announced by the Department of the Interior on July 29, 1976, are being revised and will be republished for public comment in June, 1977, due to changes required by new legislation, the department announced today.

The original proposal, developed by the Bureau of Land Management, provided a 60-day public review and comment period. This was then extended to Jan. 31, at the request of state officials and members of Congress from various western states.

However, the Oct. 21, 1976, approval of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, calls for some revision of the proposed regulations which must also go through a public review and comment period.

"Specifically, the new law provides for establishment of grazing advisory boards for most administrative districts of the Bureau of Land Management when requested by a majority of the grazing permittees in a district, and issuance of grazing permits and leases for periods of up to 10 years," according to Idaho BLM State Director William L. Mathews.

Mathews said that as originally announced, the revised regulations would enable the BLM to emphasize consideration of environmental values and other resource uses in allocating grazing privileges and in the development, construction and maintenance of range improvements.

These include wildlife habitat, wild horses and burros, recreation, watershed, and cultural values. Revisions in the proposed grazing regulations, to reflect requirements of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, and comments received on the original proposal are to be published in June of 1977.

A 60-day public review and comment period will be provided.

Water allocations cut

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The federal government is slashing water allocation to farmers in one of the nation's biggest food producing areas by 75 per cent because of the California drought.

The drastic action, ordered Monday by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, will affect the fertile San Joaquin Valley, which supplies the nation with vegetables, fruit and cotton. Higher consumer food prices are considered likely as a result of expected effect on production.

Bureau officials said life water reduction would apply to farmers served by the Central Valley Project. They said the only hope for modification of the cutback would be if northern California unexpectedly received average rain between now and summer.

"We've never had anything like this before," said David Schuster, chief of water operations. "We're talking about cutting back California agriculture in the region we serve by three quarters. And agriculture is an $8 billion-plus a year business in California."

"It's looking awful," he added of the prospect for significant rainfall. "It is possible that if we don't get the rain we figure on, we may have to reduce (allocations) even further."

Schuster said project of-

Flu shot ban eases

WASHINGTON (UPI)—HEW Secretary Joseph Califano ordered Tuesday that combination flu shots be made available immediately to the elderly and the chronically ill. But he continued suspension of the nationwide swine flu inoculation program.

Acting on the advice of a panel of medical experts with whom he conferred Monday, Califano said the threat of A-Victoria flu to the high-risk of a paralytic ailment associated with the vaccine which prompted suspension of the program in December.

He emphasized, however, he was merely recommending that state and local health officials resume combination A-Victoria and swine flu shots for the old and ailing, along with B-Hong Kong flu inoculations.

"This is a free country," he said in response to questions at a news conference, "I can't force anyone to do anything."

Califano announced these decisions:

- Lifting of the moratorium on the bivalent (combination) vaccine given the outbreak of A-Victoria "flu" at a nursing home.
- Removing the ban on B-Hong Kong vaccine which

JOSEPH CALIFANO
... some flu shots

protects against a usually milder strain of flu commonly affecting children. Outbreaks of this strain among school children have been reported by 15 states and are suspected in three others.

Continuing the moratorium on use of swine flu vaccine alone "since there are no signs of an outbreak of swine flu," vaccination program, ordered last year by President Ford, was suspended Dec. 16 due to what the U.S. Public Health Service called "a statistical association" between the shots, and a sometimes paralyzing disease known as Guillain-Barre syndrome.

Latest counts show 351 cases of the disease and 15 deaths among persons who got flu shots.

He recommended resumption of the bivalent vaccine as protection against A-Victoria flu for the more than 22 million "high risk" elderly and ill persons who have not been immunized—particularly those in health care facilities where the disease can spread rapidly.

Califano said the experts concluded that about one person in a million among the high-risk group died from the Guillain-Barre syndrome after receiving a flu shot, while flu deaths among those not immunized ran about 1,260 persons out of a million.

"Weighing these risks," he said, "the experts concluded that for more lives could be saved through the use of the bivalent vaccine than are endangered by the excess risk of contracting Guillain-Barre."

Snow level lowest since '18

JACKSON, Wyo. (UPI)—A Bureau of Reclamation official said Monday the watershed above Jackson Lake on the Snake River is only 27 per cent of normal—the lowest level since records were first kept in 1918.

Keith Ebersole, of the Bureau of Reclamation office in Moran, said the situation is comparable to the period immediately preceding the dustbowl era in the west in the 1930s.

Ebersole said the lake, which supplies irrigation water for southeastern Idaho, is already very low and said the stored water could be depleted by next summer if there is not a substantial increase in precipitation.

The Snake River is also about one fourth of its normal level because of the dry weather.

In a related announcement, the National Park Service said eight of the 13 snow courses in the park are at record lows in terms of snow depth and water content. The NPS said the water content of the snow is 65 per cent below normal for this time of the year.

Portraits of accused stranglers differ

By SHANE O'NEILL
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Two contradictory family portraits begin to take shape around the chain strangulation death of a 77-year-old woman on Easter Sunday two years ago.

Minidoka County Prosecutor H. Bill Manning sent a parade of witnesses to the stand Tuesday as the preliminary hearings here against Ernest and Griselda Rufenor resumed after a four-week delay.

The pair are charged with first degree murder and second degree kidnapping in the death of Rufenor's mother, Anna Marie Rufenor, on March 30, 1975.

(Related story, p. 4)

Manning attempted to paint a picture of a greedy couple who squandered the victim's $53,000 estate while abusing and neglecting her. Testimony has shown she died of strangulation from a 75-inch tow chain that linked her neck to a bed for four months, her body wasted by "considerable nutritional deprivation."

Defense attorney James J. May, Twin Falls, tried to depict an elderly, senile woman, incapable of caring for herself and requiring restraint. His own words suggest her son and daughter-in-law are uneducated and "stupid," their treatment of the elderly woman born of ignorance rather than malice.

Both sides say they are ready to wind up the hearing, quickly. Manning said he would probably complete prosecution testimony today. May said his defense can be completed "within a day or so, maybe considerably sooner."

They are being pressed by Jerome County Magistrate Judge Russell Shaud, who threatened a Saturday session if necessary to wrap up the case this week.

Manning played a trump card Tuesday afternoon not displayed in an earlier preliminary hearing when Chris Darchuk, eligibility official with the Department of Health and Welfare, testified Miss Darchuk had been approached by Griselda Rufenor about possible assistance for placing her mother-in-law in a nursing home, but the application was rejected.

"Darn, I thought we were going to get rid of her," Miss Darchuk quoted Griselda as saying.

The HAW official said the application was rejected because "we could not obtain information as to whether or not those assets (the $53,000 estate left Rufenor's mother by his father in 1971) were exhausted."

She said she suggested that the Rufenors sell property they owned in Washington to pay for the elderly woman's care.

Miss Darchuk testified Griselda replied, "Oh, no, we're not going to spend our money on her."

According to Rufenor's own testimony at the hearing into his mother's death, the Seattle real estate was purchased with the proceeds from sale of the family house and farm left to his mother.

Although five of six rental properties had been repossessed, he was able to sell the sixth for $19,000, which he invested in a tavern.

The testimony given by the Rufenors at the inquest was admitted into evidence Tuesday morning, over strenuous objections by May. Shaud's ruling was significant because it allows the only direct sworn testimony expected from the defendants to be made part of the preliminary hearing record.

During that inquest, Rufenor testified to his own conversion and mismanagement of the estate, his chaining of his mother by the neck to a bedpost for about four months, his return home on March 30 after six weeks in Las Vegas and his partial untangling of the chain when he found it twisted to only two feet.

About seven hours later his mother was dead, strangled by the chain apparently as she tried to use a pot left beside the bed for toilet purposes.

Dr. Howard W. Crawford called the chain around the neck "rather unusual" and added it was "fraught with danger" because it was "inelastic" and could kink.

"I would not use it," he said.

Crawford had seen the victim as a patient nearly a year before her death and described the body as "definitely thinner without a doubt." At May's suggestion that her weight loss was due to the chronic brain syndrome he diagnosed, Crawford replied the woman "had to have had considerable nutritional deprivation to have lost (that amount of) weight."

Crawford said the elderly woman's physical condition matched her age but she suffered memory losses and was incapable of living by herself. His records showed she had prescriptions from somewhere for a heart stimulant and a heart dilator.

Remarking that Griselda Rufenor had stated the victim was on expensive drugs and she purchased them at Minidoka Pharmacy, Manning called pharmacist Alan Maxwell.

Minidoka County Coroner King Christensen told the court Tuesday morning that the room in which the body was found was about 60 degrees and officers at the scene kept their coats on.

Teachers converse

Mini-Cassia schools hit by flu bug

RUPERT — An epidemic of various flu strains threatened today to close Mini-Cassia area schools.

Officials of both the Minidoka County and Cassia County school districts late this morning were awaiting new reports on school absenteeism before determining whether or not school doors will be closed for the week.

Both districts today were receiving reports that 21 per cent or more of the students are not in school.

Dr. F. J. Kassis advised the Minidoka district that, if students stayed home, it might break some of the cycles.

Students seem to be suffering from at least three types of flu. One entails general body aches and sharp headaches lasting three to four days. Another with an incubation period of one to two days is characterized by vomiting. Many students also are suffering severe strep throat.

Dr. Darrell Hatfield, schools superintendent in Minidoka County, was trying to arrange postponement of Saturday night basketball games here against Skyline High School. He said tonight's games against Idaho Falls will be played, whether or not schools are closed today.

Junior high school dances scheduled Friday and Saturday will be canceled if schools are closed.

Norman Hurst, instructional director in Cassia County, said the public health nurse was visiting some schools this morning to check on the flu effects.

Cassia County has been hit hardest in the southeast, while Minidoka County appears to be suffering from the illness in the western section.

Hurst said Ruff River High at Malta reported 27 per cent absenteeism Tuesday and 26 per cent today. The elementary school there had about one-third of the students out of school both days.

Reports on absenteeism today in other Cassia County schools were sparse, but Hurst said it averaged about 20 to 22 per cent on Tuesday.

Dr. Hatfield said 199 of 600 students at West Minico Junior High were absent today and 134 of 450 were absent at Paul Elementary.

TF school bonds sold

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls school district taxpayers received a financial break Tuesday night when $4.9 million in bonds to build a new junior high sold at lower than expected interest rates.

School district fiscal agent Peter Perry told the school board the winning interest rate bid of about 5.4 per cent would save taxpayers about $750,000 over the 6 per cent rate estimated when voters went to the polls last October.

Perry said the bidding results gave him "great pleasure and tremendous relief."

Prior to the bid opening, Perry had cautioned the board to expect interest rates in the neighborhood of 5.7 per cent under prevailing bond market conditions.

The caution was a bit of dramatizing, however, since a consortium headed by Perry's own bank, Idaho First National, which was acting as fiscal agent for the sale, had submitted a bid, the net interest cost was about 60 per cent of the value of the bonds.

The bonds, which will be used to build a replacement for O'Leary Junior High, were approved just last fall by a paper-thin margin of four votes out of more than 5,000 cast.

The winning bid on the bonds was one of seven submitted. The high bid of about 5.12 per cent was submitted by Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co., Chicago. Most of the remaining bids were in the 5.08 per cent range.

US pays $1.6 million to buy ranch beauty

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News Writer

KETCHUM — The U.S. Forest Service has paid over $1.6 million to preserve the beauty of the second-largest parcel of privately owned land in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area (SNRA).

On Jan. 26 the scenic easement deed on 1,678 acres of land owned by John Breckenridge in the southern portion of the Sawtooth Valley was signed, according to Paul Zimmerman, private lands director for the SNRA.

Upon signing the deed Zimmerman presented Breckenridge with a check for $1.6 million dollars, the SNRA official said.

Included in the terms of the deed is the option to purchase by Nov. 1, 1977, a scenic easement on another 806 acres of Breckenridge's land in the same area, Zimmerman said. This land would be purchased at about the same $93 per acre price, he said.

"The scenic easement deed reflects interests in land that are acquired by the U.S.," Zimmerman said about the transaction which leaves the actual land ownership in private hands.

"The scenic interests here are the right to subdivide—the property—for recreational development, the right to place restrictions on structural development, and environmental restrictions in relation to the Salmon River and streambank protection."

These are the major restrictions, Zimmerman said, along with several other general environmental restrictions. The rights purchased through the scenic easement go to the government "perpetuity."

The U.S. Forest Service has now acquired 26 scenic easements on about 7,000 acres of land in the SNRA, Zimmerman said. The right to purchase such easements on private land was granted in April 1971 when an act directed the secretary of agriculture to "protect and enhance the scenic and pastoral values within the area," he said.

The acquisition of this scenic easement on the Breckenridge land is particularly important because it is a "key ownership," according to Zimmerman. The land is located in the Sawtooth Valley between the Pettit and Alturas lakes area.

It is a key ownership because there is very little topographical or vegetational relief on the property, he said. It borders a long stretch of highway that runs through the SNRA, and encompasses the road to Pettit Lake as well as a long stretch of the Salmon River.

"We are satisfied with the arrangement," Miriam Breckenridge said about the transaction. "We feel that the settlement was fair."

"I think I could say this," Mrs. Breckenridge continued, "John Breckenridge worked from the beginning for the concept of having a national recreation area there and to ensure that the scenic easement was included in the bill. If the general public is to have an area set aside for recreation and preservation, in fact, and I feel too, that then the private owner has to be compensated for the change in usage for total loss of land."

Mrs. Breckenridge said many people were in favor of making the Sawtooths into a recreation area but not many of them "forgot when they ask for these kinds of things that it means it's going to be a curtailment of their private rights."

"If I had my own personal preference the Salmon River country would be as it was 25 years ago," she said. "But there's no way you can go back. I loved it when there were not lots of people, but Idaho has been discovered and so has the beauty of the Sawtooths."

The SNRA has about $8.5 million for scenic easement and land acquisitions in 1977, Zimmerman said. The largest privately-owned land parcel in the SNRA, owned by the Salmon Falls Sheep Co., is now under appraisal for a similar scenic easement, Zimmerman said.

ERA foe at historic vote

Hailey 8th grade scores top norms

By GEORGE WILEY
and CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News Writers

HAILEY — Hailey eighth graders averaged a year and a half ahead of national norms and often nearly a school year ahead of Idaho students in a grade achievement test given last fall by the state.

The test, designed to establish a state norm for Idaho students, compared 40 national averages, was given to selected grades in schools throughout the state.

About 100 students comprising the eighth grade at Hailey Junior High took the test.

On the composite score for the test, Hailey students averaged 9.5 ninth grade, fifth month, compared to the state average of 8.7, which placed them about eight months ahead of Idaho students and about a year and a half ahead of the national average of 8.0.

In all test categories the national average was set at 8.0. Each decimal placing above that level represents a school month of achievement, meaning the Hailey eighth graders averaged achievement comparable to mid-year ninth graders on the national level.

The Hailey students also beat the state averages in all but one category. In social studies they fell to 9.6, three months behind the state average of 9.9.

The only category in which the Hailey eighth graders failed to meet the ninth grade mark was in spelling, where they averaged 8.9, still nearly a year ahead of the national mark and two months ahead of the state mark.

The Hailey students did particularly well in math, where they averaged 9.5 compared to the state's 8.5. They also reflected Idaho students' tendency to score well in science. The Hailey mark was 10.6, while Idaho students had averaged 9.7.

Senate votes 18-17 to rescind ERA ratification

LI Gov. William Murphy, president of the Senate, following the advice of the Judiciary and Rules Committee, announced a two-thirds majority would be needed to rescind the ERA.

Senator Watkins called the ruling.

Then with Senator Risch quoting from Mason's rules of Parliamentary Procedure, the Senate voted by one vote to overturn Murphy's ruling on 18-17 split.

Although the Senate voted 18-17 against a ruling by the chair that passage of the ERA rescinder would require a two-thirds majority, a special meeting of the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee voted to reaffirm its ratification of ERA required a two-thirds majority rather than simple majority.

They argued that the original ratification was passed by a two-thirds majority; however, opponents of that ruling held that there was nothing in the Senate rules which required the two-thirds vote.

The House passed the ERA rescinder a week ago on a 44-26 vote.

When the Senate vote was formally announced, Sen. Norma Dohler, D-Moscow, rose to express his disappointment.

"This day will live in infamy," she said.

Fourteen Republicans and four Democrats voted to rescind the ERA. They were: (Republicans) — Abrahams, Bradshaw, Budge, Cobbs, Craig, Crystal, Risch, Smith, Steen.

Swenson, VanEngelen, Watkins, Williams, Yarborough.

(Democrats) — Blieu, Egbert, Hartvigsen, Merrill.

Six Republicans and 11 Democrats voted not to rescind the ERA. They were: (Republicans) — Barker, Ball, Brasney, High, Klein and Little. (Democrats) — Bell, Black, Chase, Dohler, Judd, Riebert, Kighorn, Manley, Mitchell, Murphy, Twigg.

Freight rate hike may hit Gem farmers

BOISE — Idaho farmers may be struck a double blow this year if freight rate increases for both truck and rail shipping go into effect.

A federal ruling on rail freight will require the Idaho Public Utilities Commission (IPUC) to raise Idaho in-state rates to a par with national interstate rates unless the ruling is successfully appealed.

The move could cost Idaho shippers upwards of $700,000 annually, and the IPUC has indicated it may not even appeal the ruling.

The Idaho Motor Tariff Bureau, which represents about 250 trucking firms in the state, has also petitioned the IPUC for a 20 per cent rate hike for most agricultural products.

The IPUC plans public hearings on the truck rate application soon.

In the railroad ruling, a three-man board of the federal Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) in late January directed the IPUC to allow ICC interstate rates for shipments by rail from point-to-point within Idaho.

The ruling overruled an earlier refusal by the IPUC to grant the rail carriers' requests for increasing rates to the national level.

The ICC decision would implement interstate rate increases going as far back as 1971.

The move could force the federal agency the power to regulate interstate rates in Idaho. The decision could mean as much as $700,000 in increased costs to growers and other shippers who send goods by rail within the state.

The IPUC has 30 days from the Jan. 29 date of the ICC ruling to appeal.

IPUC Commissioner Robert Lengen has indicated, however, that an overworked legal staff may prevent the commission from filing appeal.

"Basically, he's expressing concern," Andrews said. "He wants people to be aware of our situation. This is an increase that affects a majority number of people."

In its ruling, the ICC board found that its interstate rates were reasonable and that shipments within Idaho had to be completed under essentially the same conditions as interstate shipments.

"I am concerned that adding an appeal to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to an already burdensome case would diminish the quality of the staff's work," Lengen said.

Lengen added that such an appeal could require hundreds of man-hours of legal work.

"We have talked to the legislature, but they appear not to be listening," Lengen said in reference to requests for more staff.

IPUC information officer Gurn Andrews said Lengen's statement did not mean the commission would definitely forego the appeal.

The IPUC had denied the increases on interstate shipments because of a lack of evidence that interstate costs required the increases, Andrews said.

He said the ICC rate increases went back to a 1971 general freight increase of 12 per cent and included a 10% increase of 10 per cent.

He said the IPUC had allowed some rail carriers rate increases during that time but had not applied the ICC increases uniformly or fully.

The proposed truck freight increase will go to public hearings after investigation of the request by IPUC auditors.

Montana drops Utahs

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Montana's Richardson duo combined for 43 points and 24 rebounds to lead the Grizzlies to a 73-67 non-conference basketball win over Utah State Tuesday night.

Michael R. Richardson led all scorers with 24 points and Michael J. Richardson topped all rebounders with 14 retrieves. Montana built leads of up to seven points three times in the first half, only to see the Aggies rally to a 35-34 halftime edge. In the second half, the lead changed hands three times before the Grizzlies took an apparently comfortable 69-64 margin with 15 seconds left.

A three-point play by Jeff Meyer narrowed the score to 69-67, but two free throws each from Ben DeMers and Michael R. Richardson ensured the win for Montana.

Auburn under scrutiny

AUBURN, Ala. (UPI) — Auburn University Athletic Director Lee Hayley confirmed Tuesday that the school is under investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for recruiting violations.

"Approximately Feb. 1, a notice was received from the NCAA office that said 'a preliminary inquiry into the athletic policies and practices of Auburn University' was being initiated," Hayley said in a prepared statement.

"The notice further stated that 'as of this date the allegations have not been sufficiently investigated to determine whether an official inquiry is warranted.'"

Hayley said the university has had no additional contact with the NCAA concerning the inquiry.

Warriors batter Bullets

OAKLAND (UPI) — Rick Barry scored a season-high 42 points and the Golden State Warriors breezed to a 128-104 NBA victory over the Washington Bullets Tuesday night.

The victory was the Warriors' 11th in their last seven games and handed the Bullets only their second loss in their last 12 games.

Oregon defense praised

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Second-ranked UCLA might be the team to beat in the Pac-8 basketball race, but the Bruins take a back seat to the pressure defense which has carried surprising Oregon to a second place tie.

"Oregon played us better than any team we've faced this season — they were great defensively," California coach Dick Edwards told the weekly meeting of Bay Area coaches and newsmen Tuesday.

Edwards, whose Bears host the Ducks in a rematch Thursday night, had good reason to be impressed. Oregon walloped Cal 75-49 at Eugene Saturday, limiting the losers to 16 field goals and 16 rebounds. The Ducks top the Pac-8 in defense, allowing 56.2 points per game.

Gilmore sparks Bulls

CHICAGO (UPI) — Artis Gilmore scored 24 points and grabbed a season-high 23 rebounds to lead the Chicago Bulls to a 111-89 victory Tuesday night over the San Antonio Spurs.

Five other Bulls besides Gilmore hit double figures as Chicago won the game in the fourth quarter, outscoring the Spurs 14-5 in the first 5:32 to mount a 57-7 lead.

Chicago led 52-44 at the half with Gilmore notching 18th 14 points and 14 rebounds. The 7-2 center once pulled down 31 rebounds, his all-time high, when a member of the Kentucky Colonels in the now defunct American Basketball Association.

Blazers lose at home

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — David Thompson scored a season high 40 points and Denver's All-Star front line shot 70 per cent Tuesday night as the Nuggets handed the Portland Trail Blazers their second straight loss at home, 119-111.

Denver's win, its first after two losses on a five game road trip, retained for the Nuggets the NBA's best winning percentage of .697 on a 34-17 record. Portland, 35-26, has the league's second best record.

After taking a 55-38 halftime lead, the Nuggets were outscored 31-23 in the third quarter and led by only one, 83-87, at the end of the period.

Clemson stuns Deacons

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Clemson's Stan Rome scored 15 points and the 20th-ranked Tigers parlayed their free throw shooting into a 70-66 upset of sixth-ranked Wake Forest Tuesday night in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

The contest was tied three times before Rome hit a 10-foot jumper with 2:07 remaining for a 66-64 lead, and the Tigers converted four of six free throws from that point to hang on for the win.

The Deacons fought back from an eight point deficit midway through the second half and tied the score 64-64 with 3:41 left to play. Their only points in the final two minutes came on a 30-footer by Jerry Schellenberg with nine seconds left.

Rockets defeat Cavs

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mike Newlin's two baskets helped Houston break open a close game early in the fourth quarter and Rudy Tomjanovich protected the lead with his outside shooting to lead the Rockets to a 97-81 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers Tuesday night.

Houston, 28-22 for the season, moved into second place in the NBA's Central Division with Cleveland and the win.

Tomjanovich led all scorers with 26 points. Calvin Murphy added 23 and Newlin chipped in with 16 as the Rockets won their first game for their new owner.

Braves rip 76ers

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Former Notre Dame stars John Shumate and Adrian Dantley led the Buffalo Braves in a 99-89 romp over the NBA Atlantic Division-leading Philadelphia 76ers Tuesday night.

Shumate lopped the Braves with 22 points, but it was Dantley who broke out of a scoreless first half to lead in nine points and push Buffalo to a 79-69 lead with 2:22 left in the third period. Dantley, who finished with 13 points, limited Julius Erving to six points and his defensive work forced Dr. J. to the bench much of the second half.

Knicks beat Lakers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bob McAdoo scored 23 points and grabbed 17 rebounds, plus helped to effectively stop Kareem Abdul-Jabbar Tuesday night, in pacing the New York Knicks to their most impressive victory of the season, 125-107, over the Los Angeles Lakers.

Wall-Frazier, playing in only the second and fourth quarters, added 20 points and Earl Monroe 19 as New York handed Los Angeles its third straight loss and prevented the Lakers from moving into the tie for first place in the Pacific Division with Portland.

Though Jabbar led Los Angeles with 22 points, three Knicks centers and McAdoo limited the league's second-leading rebounder to six rebounds as New York ended a two-game losing streak.

CSI needs win more than national record

TWIN FALLS — The possibility of tying a national consecutive winning streak record will be secondary to winning a game toward the regional championship Tuesday night.

College of Southern Idaho, now reportedly within a game of the national winning streak record, will be at Treasure Valley. It is the "must" variety as it counts toward selecting the two Idaho division representatives in the regional playoffs next month.

CSI defeated TVCC in an earlier meeting in Twin Falls. But the key here, as Coach Boyd Grant sees it, is that both North Idaho and Ricks defeated the Chukars at Ontario. "If we don't win, we actually will lose our advantage on the other teams — and still have to play them on their courts," he said of the two primary contenders.

North Idaho defeated TVCC by 12 while Ricks won on a last-second shot by one.

Those two defeats, coupled with the loss at Twin Falls, all but mathematically eliminated TVCC from regional contention.

That gives them several places in facing CSI. As such losers the Chukars should be loose, they have the "homecourt advantage" and the extra incentive of salvaging a disappointing year (from playoff standpoints) by knocking off the No. 1 ranked school in the nation.

Meanwhile, Coach Grant has returned his charges to defensive drills.

"We still haven't played defense the way we'd like to see them," he said. "These things are something they should have learned the basics about years ago. But most of them tell me they played nothing but zone defense from junior high on up. They're used to just defending an area without having the concentration and intensity that the man game demands."

The big plus for CSI of late has been the continuing improvement of Antonio Martin and Art Williams.

"It's just a matter of them having, for all intents and purposes, a year of college ball behind them now," Coach Grant said. "They're starting to play to their potential and I believe they will get better every time."

"Art set them buzzing in the stands with this rebounding against Utah State," he said. "Some of his rebounds were spectacular. It looked like he was taking the ball at the top of the glass."

Concerning the business of the national win streak record, Coach Grant said "I was informed by a few media men that the record accepted by the NCAA is 42 and was set by some junior college in Massachusetts."

He added with a smile "If we win Thursday night, I thought I might call up Friday morning and see. I definitely wasn't going to call before we actually had No. 42 in hand. I guess I'm kind of a pessimist about things like that."

Miller said, noting the father is the former middleweight champion of the world. "I understand young Vollmer is just getting back into the sport after returning from a mission. It would make a good match if we can put it together. Either way, though, I know that Gene Vollmer will be here for the fights." Vollmer said he is leathe to pre-billing the matchups for amateur fights. All amateur programs are marked with absenteeism and substitution from announced lineups.

"You have to remember that these guys are amateurs and a lot of times something will come up in their lives or work that prevents them from leaving. A lot of them get a little excited during their physicals, their blood pressure goes up and the doctors won't let them fight. A lot of things happen to cause these changes."

"If a couple of them don't come off you always hear about it from disappointed fans. I think it's better for everyone concerned to say we plan to have about 12 matches with as many state and regional champions as we can get here fighting that night. We can always guarantee a lot of action for the fans and competition for boxers. That's what amateur boxing is all about."

NFL contract talks stalemated again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The pro football owners and players resumed bargaining again today on a slightly more pessimistic note, but still striving for a settlement of their marathon contract dispute.

A four-hour secret negotiating session Tuesday resulted in a "no progress" report from the NFL Players Association and the owners' Management Council but both sides agreed to meet again for the second day in a row to try narrowing their differences.

A union spokesman said the bargaining team for the players led by President Dick Anderson of the Miami Dolphins and NFLPA Executive Director Ed Garvey was a little disappointed that the Tuesday meetings produced little progress toward a contract breakthrough. Terry Bledsoe, a spokesman for the owners, declined to characterize the results of the four-hour negotiating session.

Before the Tuesday meeting began, Garvey observed "by Wednesday night, we should know what issues separate us. Hopefully there will be a lot fewer than now." Union vice president Len

Haus of the Washington Redskins said "we're optimistic we can come to an agreement."

Sources said however there seemed to be seven unrelated issues on the table to end the three-year impasse that has prompted two player strikes and a series of court cases ending in adverse rulings against the owners.

These included a revision of the annual pro football college draft system and revamping of the rights of veterans to play out their option and sign with another team without NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle being allowed to set mandatory compensation. In players or draft choices from the club signing a free agent.

Both of these have been struck down as antitrust violations in the past year by federal courts.

Tuesday's announced meeting at the union's Washington headquarters was abruptly switched to an undisclosed site and such a tactic, sometimes presages the nearing of an agreement. But Garvey sent word through his office that there had been "no progress."

Champion ring program slated

TWIN FALLS — A meeting of boxing champions is the likeliest name available for the third annual Elks amateur boxing card Feb. 18.

Norm Vollmer, Twin Falls, also the south-eastern boxing commissioner for the state, said he anticipates having 20 boxers, representing all 11 weights, who have won either state or regional golden gloves, AAU and Junior Olympic titles.

"One match that I am trying to put together is a form of public respect," Vollmer said. "We're trying to lineup a match between Joey Keene of Emmet and Dyck Godby of Gooding. Those two have put together impressive winning streaks and all the time I hear 'why don't we get to see Godby and Keene?'"

"I've talked to Keene about it and he seems willing. I haven't talked to Godby yet but I will in the next day or two," he continued. But even if he can't get those two together, Vollmer already has a boxer who has defeated both of them on the line. That boxer, who will go at 165 in this program, is Carmen Toby, a Nevada who also is the national Indian middleweight champion.

"We're hopeful of lining him up against DeLynn Fulmer, Gene Fulmer's son," Vollmer said, noting the father is the former middleweight champion of the world. "I understand young Vollmer is just getting back into the sport after returning from a mission. Volmer said, noting the father is the former middleweight champion of the world. "I understand young Vollmer is just getting back into the sport after returning from a mission. It would make a good match if we can put it together. Either way, though, I know that Gene Vollmer will be here for the fights." Vollmer said he is leathe to pre-billing the matchups for amateur fights. All amateur programs are marked with absenteeism and substitution from announced lineups.

Wakefield playing for Loyola-Chicago

Andre Wakefield, College of Southern Idaho's premier defenseman the past two years, is alive and well — and playing basketball — at Loyola of Chicago.

That news came in the mail the other day and we were a little surprised since our last report on Andre indicated he would have to sit this year out. But the massive news the Chicago native became eligible Dec. 15 and has been performing well.

He made his Loyola debut as a reserve Dec. 15 and picked up eight points as Loyola dropped a 71-68 decision to Wisconsin in Madison.

From then on, the third-team-NCAA-American, has been a starter for the Ramblers. His first starting assignment came against Northern Illinois and the Ramblers took home a 61-59 decision.

He currently is averaging 10.8 points per game with a season high of 15. He's twice reached that level against Toledo and St. Mary's. Minn. Andre has been in double figures six of the 10 games.

Another CSI grad, Eric Hovey, is and isn't looking forward to Thursday night. That's the night he and his Denver University teammates "invade" University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

"It's going to be great to see and play against them. I understand you can't buy a ticket to any of their games and their fans are rabid. That's always fun — a packed house and a lot of noise," he said.

On the other hand, Hovey has known for a couple of weeks that he'll be the starting point guard.

"Have you ever seen them on TV or on film? Man, they're quick. They've got to be the quickest team I have ever seen. I told (Svein) [Denver's Jimmy Thompson] Denver's wingmen for this game they'd better be moving fast. The time because if those quick guys come after me, I'm going to be throwing it somewhere."

Still on CSI, Coach Boyd Grant says he is trying to line up a mid-November tournament with good competition here next fall and if that reaches fruition, the Eagles will be playing in two tournaments of outstanding quality.

The teams coming in here this far would be a junior college out of Seattle, Bismillah, Wash. and the University of Nevada, Reno. Santa Rosa, California. Another team will be added to that lineup.

Coach Grant is shooting for Nov. 17-18-19 dates on that one. If it is settled, CSI will get Casper for the T-Bird classic, which is traditionally played over the Thanksgiving weekend. (Casper, by the way, the T-Bird either stands for Thunderbirds or turkey in observance of the season.)

A couple of weeks later, CSI would go into it, never-never land, of California for the Santa Rosa tournaments. We call it never-never since California Junior colleges do not belong to the national organization. These are seldom seen with or against out-of-state competition.

SNOW and warmer than usual weather rewarded cross-country skiers in the Stanley Basin over the weekend. Getting across the land opens up beautiful views to these hardy enough to try it.

Sims' aims revolve with basketball

GLENN FERRY — For Glenn Sims the future is mapped out and it's all connected with basketball.

The 65½ Glenn Ferry basketball center hopes to parlay basketball talents into a scholarship which in turn will enable him to embark on a coaching career in which he'll try to develop that talent in others. "I just enjoy the game," he says. "I've helped with the team here a little and the junior high school teams and I really enjoyed it. I teach them some things about basketball and they teach me things, things other people can't show me."

He already is starting to understand that some players do great difficulty in doing things on the floor that Sims can do easily. "It's like Coach (Bob) Belliston told me (when Sims was on the Glenns Ferry junior team) it takes time and practice. You have to learn to have patience," Sims says. "That's what working with these younger teams is teaching me."

Asked if he'd noticed the anguish which Coach Gordon

Brown endured in the last two state tournaments when coaching Sims simply smiled "that's one of the hazards."

Sims first came to basketball seriously in the fourth grade. And he's worked on his game hard ever since. "I wasn't the big kid... not a lot taller than most," he recalls of those years "until the eighth grade."

He spurted about six inches from the end of the seventh grade until starting school as a freshman. "But even when I was little I played underhanded," he notes. "I've played some forward, when I was a freshman and sophomore but not since then." Sims realizes that spending a high school career playing with your back to the basket at a short (compared to college centers) 6-5 doesn't make him attractive to college recruiters. In fact, at 6-5, Sims would be considered the "small" forward on just about any college team. It would have been much more beneficial for the youngster to have played guard.

But towns a lot larger than Glenns Ferry don't have 6-5 kids in sufficient profusion to allow the high school coach to make guards of 6-5 players.

But Sims realized that a while back and he's been working on moves and putting the ball on the floor as much as possible.

"That's what I worked on at all the basketball camps," he says. "I've gone to at least one basketball camp since I was a freshman and two the past two years."

I feel they help. I think every kid who wants to play basketball should go to one a year. Each one teaches you something different. A lot of it is repetition but the more exposure you get to anything the more it should help. Sims is considerably more at ease these days as an ankle injury sustained in practice appears to be coming around a little more each day. He landed on the foot of a teammate after taking a driving shot and the resulting twist pulled the ligaments loose below the ankle.

The injury was casted for three weeks and he worked at strengthening the joint for two more weeks before getting back into action. Coach Gordon Brown reports he never missed a practice — including those over the holiday vacation.

"It's feeling a lot better now and I'm still doing the exercises and stuff," Sims reports. "It was a little sore the first couple of games but it's getting better now."

He admitted to apprehension after he first came back because the doctors had told him another such injury could prematurely end his career. "Not any more," he says of the worry. I did the first couple of games but I just had to forget it."

Coach Brown — felt the youngster turned in his finest performance in last week's surprise win over Mountain Home.

For Glenns Ferry, always a good tournament team, it should mean Sims will be at peak condition for the district playoffs in three weeks at Wendell.

Sims, however, isn't predicting much there although the Pilots currently are tied for the conference lead. "Everybody's tough that I've played against so far. We'll have to play well to do it (win district). I think we're finally coming out of the little hole we were in and playing a little better. We played good defense against Mountain Home and hopefully we can start going on now."

Mahre, Fleckenstein ski to giant slalom victories

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (UPI) — U.S. Olympian Phil Mahre, odd-defending women's overall champion Viki Fleckenstein skied to easy giant slalom wins Tuesday in the first Canadian-American series of races.

Mahre, 49, White Pass, Wash., won both the morning and afternoon men's events on Sun Valley's Warm Spring Ski Area. Fleckenstein, more than two seconds ahead of runner-up Cary Adgate.

The U.S. Ski Team's leader in World Cup overall standings this year skied through the 41 gates in the first run in one minute, 27.7 seconds. Mahre was timed in 1:40.40 in the 66-gate second run for a combined time of 2:11.20.

Adgate, 21, Boyne City, Mich., came from fourth in the first run to finish second in the overall standings in a time of 2:14.76. Mahre's twin brother Steve had been second after the first run but Steve Mahre went off the course near the bottom of the second run and failed to finish.

Greg Jones, 23, Tahoe City, Calif., a teammate of the Mahres and Adgate on the 1976 U.S. Olympic Team, was third in 2:16.41.

Fleckenstein, 21, Syracuse, N.Y., easily captured first in the one-run women's Can-Am giant slalom. She was timed at 1:25.29. She was timed in 1:25.29.

Heldi Pries, 15, Lakeport, N.H., finished second in 1:26.61. But Pries has already wrapped up the women's Can-Am title after her second place finish she had 149 points.

Leslie Smith, 19, Killington, Vt., moved into second place in the Can-Am standings with 99 points after finishing third in the giant slalom. She was timed in 1:27.69. Bob Hill, 19, Rutland, Vt., was fourth in the men's race in a time of 2:16.73, followed by John Tenge, 20, Monticello, Vt., 2:16.81; Mike Dursch, 21, Mazama, Wash., 2:16.91; and Kelli Humfrey, 22, Calgary, Alberta, Canada, 2:17.29.

Dursch is the men's overall Can-Am leader, now with 11 points.

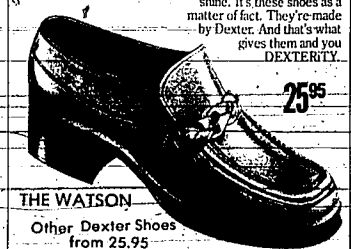

Susan Aslett, 19, Etobicoke, Ontario, Canada, was fourth in the women's giant slalom with a time of 1:27.81, followed by Vanita Haining, 20, Calgary, 1:28.60; Sherry McKinney, Squaw Valley, Calif., 1:29.03; and Jane Tidball, 20, Langley, B.C., 1:29.10.

The men and women will compete in a giant slalom Wednesday and a slalom Thursday. All races will be on Warm Springs Run, due to the lack of adequate snow on the other runs. The two races Wednesday and Thursday will end the 1977 Can-Am Series.

Fire retardant can cause cancer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An environmental group Tuesday called for a federal ban on the sale of all children's sleepwear containing a widely used fire retardant named "Tris" which it said is a "potent" cause of cancer in animals.

Citing a "significant cancer hazard," the Environmental Defense Fund petitioned the Consumer Product Safety Commission to:

- Ban the sale of all Tris-treated garments.
- Investigate ways of disposing of all stocks of such garments in a way that will have a minimum environmental impact.
- Issue a general public warning to dispose of any Tris-treated garments.
- Investigate the risks of alternative chemicals to Tris.
- Allow the sale of 100 per cent polyester and blends without chemical additives.

The group conceded the nightgown industry has apparently already sharply reduced its use of the chemical and may eventually phase it out by switching to fabrics which are fire resistant in themselves and do not need retardant chemicals.

Dr. Robert Harris, an EDF researcher, told a news conference however that even if that happens garments made of 100 per cent polyester fabric will might have to be treated with Tris substitutes, which are still untested and should be examined before they enter the marketplace.

He said there is "unambiguous data" that Tris, which sometimes amounts to 10 per cent of the weight of a treated nightgown, can be absorbed through the skin. It can also enter the body through the common childhood habit of sucking on the garment, he said.

One year ago, Harris said, 60 to 70 per cent of all children's sleepwear was Tris-treated. The figure now amounts to 20 per cent, he said, and the coming spring and summer line of nightgowns will be about 10 per cent Tris-treated.

Tax aides to Hailey

HAILEY — Internal Revenue Service and state income tax agents will be in Hailey on Feb. 16 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the commissioners room, Blaine County Courthouse, to provide assistance for local taxpayers in filing income tax returns, according to J.W. King, field auditor for the Idaho Tax Commission.

Crater moon park has visit increase

ARCO — Craters of the Moon National Monument was visited by 251,300 persons in 1976, a gain of 14 per cent over the previous year, Supt. Robert "Cy" Hentges said this week.

Nex Perce National Historical Park, Idaho's other unit of the National Park System, was visited by 194,200, up 19 per cent from last year.

Visits to the 18 national parks in the four-state Pacific Northwest — Region of the National Park System (Alaska, Idaho, Oregon and Washington), reached a new high of 8,558,800, an increase of 12 per cent.

Nation-wide, a preliminary count indicates that 202 million persons visited the nearly 300 units of the National Park System during the Bicentennial Year, an increase of some 10 per cent over 1975.

FOR RELEASE THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You eager to get your affairs arranged on a more solid structure, but it seems that there are all sorts of delaying conditions that prevent you from feeling that you are achieving this important objective. Be more objective with others, too, and more aware of your long-range plans and than you won't be disappointed.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make sure you know what the influential aspect of you and try to please to the best of your ability. Use care in the handling of some credit affair and avoid later trouble. Be wiser to the ways of others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't jump into new interests without further study or you can make glaring errors. Get busy at important tasks ahead early. Avoid one who is acting overly impudent and could give you trouble.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Deal more intelligently with those who owe you money and vice versa in business especially. Your closest tie is too demanding, but use tact. Avoid one who has ulterior motives. Be careful in driving.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get partnership affairs on a better basis where associates are concerned and be more successful in the future. Situations arise that are not to your liking, but use tact and all will be fine.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 23) Tackle all those duties ahead of you and don't run off on any tangents. Keep promises you have made. Take the treatments that will give you more strength and vitality. Be careful in political matters.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 22) You want to get into amusements far afield from the norm, but you would regret it later, so be circumspect. Be kinder with your mate and have more harmony, happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't be too critical about the conditions at home or it gets worse. Do what you can to better conditions there quietly. Try to be more cheerful and lift the spirits of others. Handle money matters wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't upset good friends or they could resent it and you would lose them. Be careful in driving, walking and avoid accidents that could easily occur today. Steer clear of gossip.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't commit yourself to further expense where some new project is concerned if you are not sure of it. Add more to bank account instead. Cut down on expenses wherever you can.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try not to antagonize others because you are not at all in a good mood today. Take better care of your health and you soon feel more cheerful. Be careful of those who have an eye on assets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You want to get busy on new activities but have other things to handle before you can do so successfully. Take care of you nothing that could later bring you trouble with your mate. Be loyal.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Friends may be disappointing to you but only because they are under pressure of some sort. But later they can be helpful. Don't be forceful to gain some desire which you think means much to you but you later realize is hardly worthwhile.

Cargo containers are changing the character of the world's seaports. With those big sealed boxes the size of truck-trailers, a freighter can be unloaded and reloaded in about six hours. Fewer sailors stay so long ashore. Over land, containers are being used to move goods to the waterfronts are shrinking. Clip joints, nude clubs, bordertown bars, they're closing down by the hundreds. It's getting so a guy may have to go all the way uptown to get beat up and thrown in the jug any more.

DOGS

Q. "Where does the cocker spaniel rank now on that list of most popular dog breeds?"
A. It's No. 7. Right behind No. 1, poodle; No. 2, German Shepherd; No. 3, Irish setter; No. 4, Doberman pinscher; No. 5, beagle, and No. 6, dachshund. But ahead of No. 8, miniature schnauzer; No. 9, Labrador retriever; and No. 10, collie.

Q. "Is there any proof that fish bite better either when the bar is rising or falling?"
A. None. On the contrary, extensive research over a score of years indicates there's no correlation between the numbers of fish caught and the barometric pressure.

ANGELS

Some ancient Greeks believed the earth was enclosed within nine spiritual spheres, sort of like the little of nine Chinese boxes. Angels of various powers, they thought, lived in each sphere. Those that inhabited the outermost sphere, the ninth, were of the highest order, closest to God. And they were thought to be absolutely delighted with their position in the scheme of things. Our Language man says this is the mixture of angels that most probably led some latter-day linguists to coin the phrase "on cloud nine."

The Wolverine State is not Michigan's official nickname, nor is the wolverine its official state animal. Michigan has neither. In fact, residents thereabouts were first called wolverines during the Toledo War of 1835 by Ohioans who regarded real wolverines as dirty mean little beasts that would eat anything, a most scurrilous term.

DEAR ABBY: I am jealous of my younger sister. She's 16 and I'm 18. She's prettier than I am and has a great figure, and I'm too fat. She's also smarter than I am. She even has more personality and character than I have. (She's an extrovert and I'm an introvert.)

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (UPI) — While the East and Midwest freeze, Alaska, usually the nation's coldest state, is blanketed by balmy South Pacific air. But the pleasant days are "cussing" problems "because the economy is geared for the cold."

other big headaches — among them, much more glaciering this year than in the past, said Bruce Robinson, maintenance supervisor for the Alaska Highway Department.

Alaskans are used to winter temperatures of 40 and 50 below zero, but the current weather, ranging from about zero to 15 above, is almost a heat wave. The temperature reached 46 above on Jan. 24.

This is because there is no snow cover to keep the streams and the highways freeze all the way to the bottom, forcing the still flowing water over the banks onto the roads where it congeals into glaciers.

Sled dogs are shuffling along, Eskimo Scouts are complaining of the heat, and visitors from the "Lower 48" states are beginning to wonder about those famous Jack London stories of the Far North.

other big headaches — among them, much more glaciering this year than in the past, said Bruce Robinson, maintenance supervisor for the Alaska Highway Department.

He estimated a householder with a 1,000-square-foot house has used about 200 gallons less fuel this winter than last.

He isn't the only one singing the blues. Business is off for sellers of parkas, boots, mittens and caps. Ski shops are suffering because there's no snow.

Living

AN AMISH farmer prepares to get into his buggy after visiting P. J. Weaver, shop, Apple Creek, Ohio, which specializes in leather work. The cold and snow which brought grief to the eastern part of the Ohio States, apparently has not affected the way of life of the Amish. (UPI)

Same as usual

Amish lifestyle defeats harsh winter

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb, I had a myocardial infarction four months ago and am feeling fine except for occasional anginal pain.

My doctor is about high altitude. Right now I live near sea level. I have lived here for 11 years and I lived in Colorado and New Mexico for 24 years. Moving back to Colorado, elevation between 5000 and 7000 feet. In any way affect my heart condition? Would it be easier to get another heart attack there?

Dear Reader, In most cases you would be all right if you follow some specific rules. When you first get there don't exert yourself for a couple weeks. Then gradually increase your normal daily activity. You don't need to just sit all the time, but do not suddenly start walking long distances or engaging in hunting or fishing.

APPLE CREEK, Ohio (UPI) — The Great American snow storms of 1977 met their master halfway on Bank Street.

More snow fell on this northern Ohio hamlet than on any Sierra Nevada village, and the temperature dipped further below zero than in blighted Buffalo, N.Y. But Mother Nature's white fury went for naught in Apple Creek.

For on Bank Street begins Amish country. And these gentle folk who shun electricity, automobiles, insurance and other 20th-century cushions, defeated the storms by doing what comes naturally to them — living pretty much as great-grandfather did.

P. J. Weaver, 70, stood in his harness and shoe repair shop and stroked his gray curly beard. A visitor was telling him of the five non-Amishmen who froze to death a week earlier in nearby Fostoria in an automobile mired in a blizzard.

The car had a CB radio and a heater. A house sat 100 yards away. The men stayed put, and they died.

Weaver shook his head. "It was in the same snow that a couple of our Amish boys had woe. Their one-horse buggy tipped over. The charcoal heater in the buggy went out. It was 22 degrees below zero."

"The boys didn't stay put. They got out and made their way to a nearby house. They took the horse along, too," he said.

Weaver was facing his boy. But he was talking to Aaron Sam Holstetter, 12, and four other Amish boys in long hair and white brimmed black hats. The boys nodded. A sign they understood — one more lesson — the rightness of their community's life style. Another lesson unfolded outside in the snow.

A Cleveland man's $6,000 auto, equipped with new snow tires, had become stuck in the thigh-high white parking lot mostly filled by Amish one-horse buggies.

The non-Amish of Apple Creek called the black buggies "outsmobiles." They do not use the joke as a slur. For the buggies move with ease where autos stall. Weaver nodded to a buggy clapping in from across an openfield.

"A new buggy just cost me $700," said

Weaver, looking up his coat. "I didn't have chrome on the buggy, like some of the youngsters do. The buggy should last 25 or 30 years."

"Of course, a buggy won't last as long if a son takes it out and speeds," he said, laughing. The harness maker provided shovels and axes and the five boys huffed and puffed and shoveled. The $6,000 Detroit buggy was freed.

Down the road, Mrs. Eli Miller smiled in sympathy when a snowed-out of the Cleveland hotel notices to guests explaining that the "energy crisis here" is responsible "for any inconvenience this may cause you in your room."

Such as being cold.

"We have three stoves in the house," said the Amish housewife, her head in the traditional white under and black over-bonnet. "I have to carry in the wood from the barn. But I'm very warm."

The 52-year-old woman wagged a finger, cautioning the visitor to beware hitting his head on the low-hanging lantern that took the place of electric lights. Didn't she miss the electrical luxuries that storm and no choice were being kept from other American women?

Mrs. Miller pointed to her foot-powered sewing machine. She gestured toward the family Bible; she had her pleasures. She frowned. She did have a modern device. It bothered her.

She showed her mouth. "I had my upper teeth removed and the false teeth bother me, so I don't wear them much," she said. But her 18-month-old granddaughter, Ruth, was being carried in by her daughter, Mrs. Esther Keim.

And Mrs. Miller reinstated her false teeth — the Amish, like others, humor children.

Off Bank Street, Amish farmer Vernon Rose Miller — Amish men, in the European tradition, take their father's Christian name as their own middle name — stood on his spoutless front porch and tried to think how his winter was any different from his 41 previous winters. A smile spread across his face.

"Oh, of course. There's so much more snow. We make more ice cream," he said. One of his sons peeked through a doorway and whispered, "Chocolate!"

Frank discussions part of sex class

NEW YORK — Almost every Saturday for the last few months, Dr. Deborah L. Phillips has been offering a one-day course in human sexuality that is designed to counter soothing advice for adults whose feelings about sex may have been bruised by the sexual revolution.

As remedies, Dr. Phillips' seminars suggest that people take "sensual holidays," or learn to avoid "first experience failures," so that none of the students — who range in age from 17 to 70 — will fail to achieve what she called "personal sexual liberation."

In the seminars, offered in Princeton, N.J., as well as in New York City and Boston, Dr. Phillips and her colleagues from the Princeton Center for Behavior Consultation, which is in Princeton but is not affiliated with the university, hope to challenge misconceptions about sex by showing the 30 persons enrolled in each workshop "what to do in specific instances, because they may never have had the opportunity to see or talk about things such as these except in porno films."

Dr. Phillips' workshops are among a small but increasing number of programs in the United States that are providing frank discussions of everyday sexual problems for laymen. Among the topics covered by the Princeton center's workshops are sensory awareness training, arousal and impotence. The training offered by Dr. Phillips and her colleagues is aimed at teaching adults how to find a clue that will increase their understanding of human sexuality and help them to feel more comfortable about sex, according to Dr. Phillips.

"Through education and enlightenment, we want to remove the mystery and the mystery of sexual activity," she said in a recent interview. "Anxiety and ignorance take away all the power of sex, and bring it down with a crash. A lot of people don't realize that the great majority never takes the opportunity to do anything that is really creative."

To teach her students, Dr. Phillips sometimes assumes the role of a self-appointed destroyer of sexual myths as she attempts to dispel such notions as that the male must be the dominant partner, or that sex after the age of 60 is impossible, or that homosexuality is a disease. But Dr. Phillips sees herself as the dispenser of preventive medicine in the form of advice that, she says, can spare her students long and costly therapy sessions with private analysts.

To skeptics who question the merits of such explicit sex education, the Rev. William Kirby, an ex-founder of the Princeton center who is the Wesleyan-Westminster chaplain at Princeton University, replied:

"We learn to drive, eat, jump rope and study, but we never watch anybody make love. Sex is a learned act. It's not a matter of being a virtuous lover. It's a matter of being a virtuous learner. The Princeton center's faculty combines psychologists and psychiatrists with experts in gynecology and other related disciplines who lecture and answer questions at the day-long workshops."

"We think it's an enriching experience," Kirby said. "It helps people to locate where they are on a sexual scale and helps them to find things to fill their curiosity banks."

Meeting scheduled

FILER — The Twin Falls Pomona Grange will meet at the Filer Grange Hall at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Frances Wells gave the safety report. Friday and Everett Benichsen gave the agricultural report.

Eldon Fessenden reported on both state and national legislation. Mr. and Mrs. Ira Kistler, Gooding, are the newly-appointed Grange deputies for this area.

The Feb. 18 meeting will include a potluck supper at 7 p.m. followed by a card party. Hostesses Friday were Mr. and Mrs. Harley Williams.

Benefit set Friday

KING HILL — A community shower will be held for Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mitchell and family Friday evening at the Grange Hall.

An open house will be held from 7 to 9:30 p.m. The Mitchell home and possessions were destroyed by fire last week. The family consists of a girl about 7 years old and boys about 9 and 12.

Everyone in the Glenns Ferry, Hammett and King Hill areas are invited to attend and participate in the shower.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

There are probably a lot of ways to bid today's hand to seven hearts. There are even more ways to stop at six or even at a mere game and some enterprising match-point bidders might find their way to an impossible seven notrump. At notrump there are just 12 tricks and no way to collect 13.

Seven hearts is a good contract although very bad breaks might beat it. South takes dummy's ace of spades and cashes two of his high trumps. Then he must play his king and queen of clubs and ace and king of diamonds.

Next, he ruffs a diamond, discards his last diamond on dummy's ace of clubs, ruffs a spade to get back to his hand and claims.

The bidding as shown is worth study. North starts proceedings by showing he wants to play in hearts. South merely bids on to game. He is looking at a rather slimy two bid.

Now North invites a slam by bidding four spades and South responds with five diamonds. This bid shows the diamond ace but denies the club ace.

North knows about the ace of clubs and shows it, whereas South bids six diamonds to show the diamond king and invite seven at the same time.

North doesn't know what South holds in clubs, but if South is interested in seven North is ready and bids it.

Ask the Jacobys

Recently, we answered a question on review of the bidding by giving the rubber bridge ruling which is that you can demand a review of the bidding any time it is your turn to bid during the auction or when the opening lead is made. We will give the more complicated duplicate rule tomorrow.

(Do you have a question for the experts? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The Jacobys will answer individual questions if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are enclosed. The most interesting questions will be used in a column and will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

50th anniversary open house set

JEROME — Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Moyes, Jerome, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on Saturday at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon J. Hopson, Blackfoot, and their grandchildren.

Arrangements have been made for a family dinner at the Hotel Bonneville in Idaho Falls that evening.

Moyes was born at Lyman, Wyo., and moved to Murfreesboro with his parents when he was 8 years old. Mrs. Moyes, the former "Mona Griffith" was born in Oakley. They were married in Twin Falls on Feb. 12, 1927. This marriage was solemnized in the Salt Lake LDS temple on Oct. 1, 1930. The couple moved to Jerome in March, 1932, and have lived there continuously since that time. A son died in 1935.

Both have been active in the LDS Church where they have held many positions over the years. Moyes is a high priest, and Mrs. Moyes is president of the Daughters of the Utah Pioneers.

Practice session

PRACTICING for the second concert of the season are two members of the Magic Valley Symphony Orchestra, Ernest Moss, left, and Ann Bertus, members of the first violin section. The concert is set for 8 p.m. Feb. 15 at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

MV Symphony plans 2nd concert Feb. 15

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Lawrence Curtis, will present its second concert of the season on Tuesday, Feb. 15, at 8 p.m. in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

A special feature of the program will be two youth soloists: Melody Youtz and Meg Rayborn, both Twin Falls. These young women are students at Boise State University studying piano with Madeline Hsu. They are also members of a duo piano class and will be performing in a piano Bach double concerto in March. They are both piano majors.

Miss Rayborn has a double major of piano performance and theory-composition. She is considering going into musical therapy. While attending school in Twin Falls, they both studied piano with Mrs. Teala Beigel. They have each received the Smith-Hackney-Ronk award, which is presented annually by the Twin Falls Music Club. They are both graduates of Twin Falls High School. Miss Youtz is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Youtz, Twin Falls, and Miss Rayborn is the daughter of Mrs. D.J. McFarland and Robert Rayborn, both Twin Falls.

Miss Rayborn will play the first movement of "Piano Concerto No. 23 in A Major K. 488" Allegro — by Mozart. Miss Youtz will play the first movement of "Piano Concerto No. 2 in F Minor, Op. 21" — by Chopin. They will both be accompanied by the symphony.

Selections by the orchestra will include "La Gazza Ladra Overture" by Rossini; "La Kije Suite Symphonique Op. 66" by Prokofiev; "Carmen Suite No. 1" by Bizet, which includes "Prelude," "Araguense," "Intermezzo," "Sequedillo," "Les Dragons d'Alcala," and "Les Torreadors." The concluding number will be "Sabre Dance" from "Gayane Ballet" by Khachaturian.

Families will be admitted on patron tickets and general admission tickets will be available at the door.

Retired teachers eye legislation

TWIN FALLS — Pending legislation, including bills on no-fault insurance and allowance of rent as an income tax deduction, have come under discussion by members of the Twin Falls-Magic Valley Retired Teacher's Association.

The group held the February meeting at the Turf Club. Mrs. Blanche Peay, president, conducted the business meeting.

Bernice Babcock discussed a number of bills pending before the legislature. Members were urged to write their congressmen, urging passage of bills which would allow income tax deductions for rent and provide for no-fault insurance.

Mrs. Fred Moore, program chairman, introduced Mrs. Jeanne Detemmer Hatchford, soprano, who sang a medley of love songs. Mrs. Charles Althart was her accompanist.

Elsie Lindgren read several original poems from her book of memory. Each was on the subject of "Love," which is the theme of the organization for February.

Mrs. Marie Miller of Kimberly introduced Gary Whitwell, Twin Falls County clerk, who is chairman for the Heart Association. He spoke on reasons for helping and donating to the Heart Fund.

Heart disease is currently the leading cause of death — 51 percent. Many times there is no pain until it is too late. Of the total donations, 75 per cent are sent to the National Heart Foundation, 25 per cent are kept in Idaho and 37 per cent is used for research and 21 per cent for the education of the public and professional people.

Mrs. Moore reminded the members of the blood pressure check at the Senior Citizens Center from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

TV dollars to lift ailing Blaine economy

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The filming of a pilot movie for NBC television here this month will bring about one quarter of a million dollars into the ailing local economy, according to studio officials.

"It's hard to approximate an exact figure," producer Robert Stambler said about money from the film's $1 million budget being spent here.

But with "salaries, rentals, materials, equipment and vehicles — pretty much the things that normally come into the making of a film," Stambler estimated "in excess of one quarter million dollars" would be spent in Blaine County.

"I have many personal feelings about it here," Stambler said. "It really saddens me to come into any place where unemployment is this high. It makes you feel good on the other hand to help the economy, even if it is just for three and a half weeks."

Filming of the movie called "Stedman" began today. A Harry Welfer Production for Columbia Pictures TV. It will be shown on NBC sometime between April and early fall.

Last week casting personnel screened close to 400 local residents for small speaking roles in the movie, according to production manager Robert D'Joux.

From these screen tests about 17 local residents were selected for minor roles in the movie. These people will be paid from $175 to $250 a day, according to casting director Claire Newell.

In addition, a minimum of 150 locals will be hired to act as "extras" in the non-speaking parts that provide a background and atmosphere for certain scenes.

Stambler said he hopes to hire as many local people for these non-speaking parts as his budget and the scenes will allow.

If the pilot movie is a success and NBC buys it for a series, one can expect quite a bit more money being pumped into the local economy throughout the year.

Stambler said 22-24 segments of the series would probably be filmed here beginning in June and running into the winter. Each segment would cost at least $25,000.

He predicted this would bring a minimum of one-half million dollars into the area.

"It would be comparable to 'Hawaii Five-O' which brings on the average $1.5 million dollars per season," Stambler, who produced "Hawaii Five-O" for two seasons, said. "It's the third largest industry in Hawaii."

Tourism is first, agriculture is second and then "Hawaii Five-O."

But it is no sure bet that "Stedman" will be bought by NBC for a series.

Although Stambler said the movie script was one of the better scripts he has worked with for pilot movies, he noted that there can be as many as 400 pilot movies made in a season. And from all these movies "maybe one will make it to TV as a series," he said.

"The fatality rate is very high," Stambler observed. "and keeping it on the air is hard."

"It's an incredible trap-shoot," he commented finally.

Together again

PRODUCER Robert Stambler, right, and Director Charles Dubin first worked together on the television series "Hawaii Five-O." Both men are together again on the filming of the pilot movie "Stedman" for NBC television. The movie is being made this month in Sun Valley by Columbia Pictures TV.

Thieves fool workers

FAIRMONT, W. Va. (UPI) — Employees of the West Virginia Welfare Department were playing tricks on them when they tried to open the office safe.

Thieves had wheeled the safe to a back room of the building, pried it open and removed about $24,000 in food stamps. In its place, the thieves left a facsimile of wood and canvas with all the proper handles and a dial pointed on the front. Philip Gusman of the food stamp office said the facsimile was so good it was hard to tell without a close look.

TF County planners set three public info meets

TWIN FALLS — Three additional public information meetings for discussion of the proposed Twin Falls County Comprehensive Plan have been scheduled by the county joint planning council.

The next meeting will be at a p.m. tonight in the CSI Academic Building, Rooms 117 and 118.

Subsequent meetings are designed for various parts of the county for the convenience of residents in adjoining communities but all meetings are open to the public.

Ann Cover, chairman of the planning commission, said the first meeting is designed for Hollister and Filer area residents and the Bull meeting for Bull, Castleford and other west-end county residents.

The first meeting was held last week in Hansen for residents of the east end of the county. Most of those commenting during the first meeting opposed the adoption of a county plan on grounds they object to regulations on use of the land they own.

Mrs. Cover said all interested persons are urged to attend the meeting. She said copies of the plan are available at the county planning and zoning office, 634 Addison Ave. W., in Twin Falls. Persons may review the plan prior to offering comments during the public meetings or in public hearings which will be held later.

Jerome aides eye problems

JEROME — The Jerome Recreation Commission members wrestled with insurance-liability problems during their weekly session Monday night.

DeWitt Moss, commission member, said a representative of Prescott and Craig Insurance firm went over coverage details with them, and more information is still needed to be sure both commission members and employees are adequately protected.

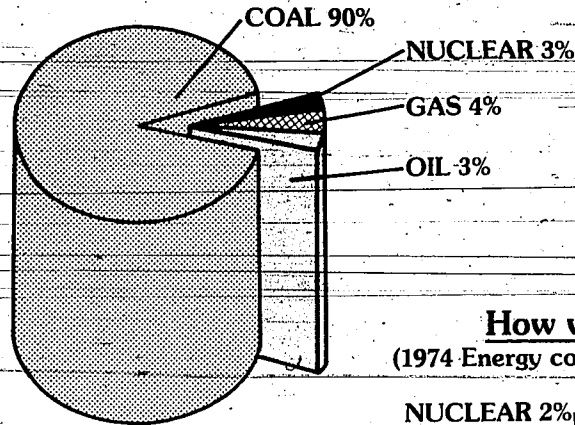

He said the commission reviewed six applications received for the position of recreation director and there are more interested persons still to be interviewed.

The group hopes to hire the director in March.

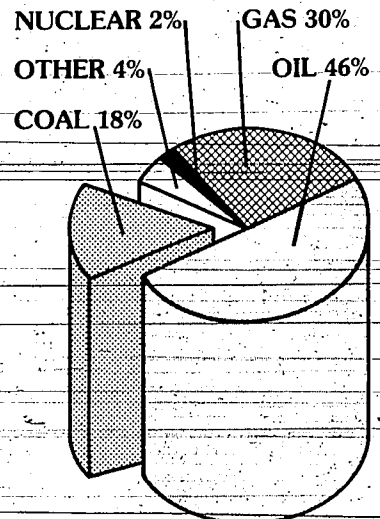

Commission members met with Jim Poulson and Lloyd Blackmon, Boise, of the State Parks Board, last week to confer over assistance available through the state agency.

America's energy problem

The energy we have (proved energy reserves economically recoverable with existing technology.)

How we use it
(1974 Energy consumption pattern)

What are the roots of our energy problem?*

- The vast reserves of coal in the United States amount to three times the energy contained in the Middle East's oil reserves, and currently account for more than 90 percent of U.S. proved energy reserves.
- Yet, over the last 75 years, the United States has switched from using coal for over 90 percent of its energy needs to depending on oil and gas for 75 percent of its energy.
- Thus, the Nation depends upon its least abundant energy resources to provide most of its energy needs.
- The result has been a growing dependence on imported energy, the availability and price of which are controlled by a few Middle East countries.
- Our task between now and 1985 is to find and develop more oil and gas and stimulate conservation to offset currently dwindling production of these fuels, as our economy is converted to the more abundant resources, such as coal and nuclear power.

- In the post-1985 period, our task is to develop new technologies that can dramatically expand our economically usable reserves of shale oil and uranium, and to make greater use of nondepletable resources, such as solar and geothermal energy.

PASSING a test was the motivation for Catirino Gallegos, right, to join in the Idaho Migrant Council's right-to-read classes taught by Roberto Feldman, who is shown helping Gallegos get through a workbook. The classes are free to all Spanish-speaking persons who wish to improve their English.

Test passed

Language barriers are overcome by new right-to-read program

TWIN FALLS — The job didn't work out, but Catirino Gallegos did pass the test.

Gallegos, a 46-year-old Chicano farm worker, wanted to be a heavy equipment operator. He wasn't worried about learning to handle the loaders and dozers at the school run by the operators' union. After years as a logger and more years on farms driving tractors and catpillars, he figured that would be the easy part.

What did worry Gallegos was passing the aptitude test to gain admission to the school. He was especially worried about the English part of the test. He knew he could speak English fluently, but he wasn't confident of his writing and reading.

To help himself out Gallegos signed up for the right-to-read program sponsored by the Idaho Migrant Council.

Working one-on-one with teacher Roberto Feldman, Gallegos began a program to prepare him to pass the language portions of the test.

"I need to learn how to write because there is a lot of writing when you get on that job (in the school)," Gallegos said.

After a month of reading and writing practice, Gallegos took the test. He passed. Before he could be accepted into the equipment school, however, he was offered a job on a Washington farm. Because he was unemployed, he took it, and moved his family from Jerome.

While Gallegos chases not to wait for the equipment school to come through, he did pass the test, and his success is a good example of how the Migrant Council's right-to-read ESL program is helping Chicanos to overcome language barriers make gains for themselves.

The Twin Falls program got underway just after the first of the year when Miss Feldman signed on as a teacher. The daughter of a mining engineer, she grew up in Argentina, Peru, Cuba and other South American countries, where she learned fluent Spanish.

There are now about 15 persons enrolled in the program, which the Migrant Council hopes to expand to about 30.

The teaching, which is free to the recipient, is funded through an HEW grant of about $82,000. The funds are part of national HEW monies aimed at wiping out illiteracy in the U.S.

The Idaho program, which includes not only Twin Falls but also Burley in the Magic Valley, is unique in that it focuses on a Spanish-speaking population.

The Twin Falls program also needs tutors to aid Miss Feldman in teaching the Chicanos, many of whom are adults. Those interested in volunteering can call 733-3336.

"It's really a challenge," Miss Feldman said. "It's going to be difficult because everybody is at a different level of ability."

Normalization, cooperation goals of U.S.-China relations, says Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter conferred with Peking's chief Washington envoy Tuesday and said he wanted U.S.-Chinese relations "strengthened very much in the next few years."

He was especially worried about the English part of the test. He knew he could speak English fluently, but he wasn't confident of his writing and reading.

He said that the United States and the People's Republic have common interests in many places in the world. Given these and our bilateral interests, I look forward to strengthened cooperation between our two countries."

The Shanghai Communiqué established diplomatic links below embassy level between the United States and the People's Republic, and said both sides would strive for "normalization" of ties through "full-diplomatic relations."

The main stumbling block there is Peking's insistence that Washington withdraw recognition from the Republic of China in Taiwan and cancel its mutual defense treaty.

Huang, who participated in the visits to China by Nixon and President Gerald Ford, said: "We believe, as long as both sides observe strictly all the principles of the Shanghai Communiqué, our relationship will continue to improve."

The Shanghai Communiqué also bars either country from seeking predominance in the Asia-Pacific region.

In an interview with United Press International and the Associated Press last week, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said: "I believe the normalization of relations with the People's Republic of China should be our ultimate goal."

Army reserves low, Chief of Staff says in testimony before Senate committee

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Army Chief of Staff Bernard W. Rogers said Tuesday it would take seven months to produce standby draft machinery to get men into the front lines.

He said serious conscription may have to be given to conscripting men to fill manpower shortages in reserve forces.

Rogers also told a Senate Armed Services Committee that he believed Communist troops "that are directly facing NATO are in the more ready than NATO defense forces" to fight war.

Under questioning about the Army's readiness, Rogers projected a shortage of as many as 320,000 men in the individual ready reserve forces, which the Defense Department would use for "immediate combat units in case of war."

He said he believed the next fiscal year will be "critical" for ability of organized reserve units to meet manpower needs, and the following year would put the individual ready reserve in "serious jeopardy."

"If we cannot fill these reserve components, then very serious consideration must be given to implementation of Selective Service" to meet manpower requirements, Rogers said.

He said the Defense Department was considering a package of bills to ease the reserve problem, but it will be very expensive.

The Selective Service System, unused since 1973, was virtually dismantled last year as a cost-saving effort of the Ford administration. A proposal to set up a manpower pool at career standing "carries administration when it took over."

Under the present system,

Rogers said it would be 110 days before the first drafted reached training and 210 days before he went to a fighting unit. "We would prefer that it might be quicker than that."

He said that if the training command, he said, Rogers' expected shortage is just above the 316,000 troops, and naval personnel, that the United States must contribute in the defense of Europe. "A tactical nuclear weapons are present as an umbrella" to protect allies from a sudden invasion.

EPA orders Ford Motors shutdown after cars fail emission standards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency Tuesday ordered Ford Motor Co. to halt production of some 1977 Ford Granadas and Mercury Monarchs after tests of production-line vehicles showed they emitted up to eight times the legal amount of carbon monoxide.

It was the first time the EPA has taken action against an automobile company based on failure of air pollution tests as cars come off the assembly line.

Acting EPA Chief John Quarles said the order applied to Granadas and Monarchs with six-cylinder, 250-cubic-inch engines, automatic transmissions and other specific features.

He said Ford planned to make about 142,000 such vehicles and already has produced 51,000.

The EPA order revoked Ford's production certificate for these models effective Friday, meaning that the date the cars may not be shipped to dealers without recertification.

In addition, EPA ordered Ford to recall the 51,000 cars already produced and distributed.

Quarles said the recall order would not prevent cars now on dealer lots from being sold.

The EPA initially certified production of the Granadas and Monarchs based on emission tests of prototypes, the same process it uses for all cars.

Quarles said tests of cars taken off the assembly line last month showed 13 of them failed to meet air pollution standards. He said illegal emissions ranged up to four times the carbon monoxide limit and averaged twice the allowable limit.

Ford knew about the violation as early as October, but did nothing about them, Quarles said. He said it is not clear whether legal action can be taken against Ford for that.

Quarles said tests of some General Motors and Chrysler products, also conducted in January, showed no serious violations. But he predicted that many cars throughout the automobile industry are failing on the assembly line to achieve the clean air standards. They met at the prototype stage.
